

Contents

Preface	11
Introduction: Kaleidoscopic Histories	13
Part 1 – Socio-historical, Theoretical, and Generic Layers	19
1 Constructing Identities – Fictionalizing Histories	23
“Disunity as Unity” – The Emergence of the Canadian Mosaic	24
Canada’s Beautiful Losers? De/Construction-sites, Pasts and Posts	31
Literary Commodities and the Globalization of Histories	38
2 Past – Memory – Fictions	47
A Prolific Genre	50
Historiographic Metafiction, and Other Histories	56
‘Tis Twenty Years Since. Or, ‘Fictions of the Past’	62
Part 2 – Interdisciplinary Innovations and Reflections	69
3 Globalization and Literature – Weighing the Impact	75
Approaches to Globalization	76
Globalizing Critical Theory and Literatures	84
Interdisciplinary Literary Spaces	88
4 From Multi to Trans. The Rise of Transcultural Studies	95
Canada’s Multiculturalisms	97
‘Multi’ vs. ‘Inter’ vs. ‘Trans’-culturalism(s)	103
Transcultural Theories	106
5 Transcultural Imaginaries	119
Space, Place, and Time	124
Voices and Perspectives	126
Transfer, Exchange, and Resistance	128

6	Understanding Migrant Pluralities – Rewriting Hi/stories	135
	How Families Haunt, And Histories Heal (M. Ondaatje)	137
	The Impossible Art of Mapping the Past (D. Brand)	144
	The Poetics of Orientation: On Truths and Certainties (M. Thien)	155
7	Canadian Polybridity and the Reinvention of Pastness	167
	The Recreation of Artists, Ancestors and Her/stories (J. Urquhart)	169
	Tracing the Lyrics of the Unvoiced (G.E. Clarke)	178
	Crisscrossing Wild West Borders and Identities (G. Vanderhaeghe)	190
8	The Reappropriation of AlterNative Past	197
	The Truth About Histories: Neopremodern Native Narratives	201
	The Future of Speaking Back: Our Story: Aboriginal Voices on Canada's Past	205
	Conclusion: The Necessity and Ethics of 'Trans'	215
	Bibliography	221
	Index	253