

contents

acknowledgments	ix
introduction: history happens vivian sobchack	1
part one: the historical event
1. the modernist event hayden white	17
2. cinematic shots: the narration of violence janet staiger	39
3. historical consciousness and the viewer: who killed vincent chin? bill nichols	55
4. “i’ll see it when i believe it”: rodney king and the prison-house of video frank p. tomasulo	69
part two: historical representation and national identity
5. antimodernism as historical representation in a consumer culture: cecil b. demille’s the ten commandments, 1923, 1956, 1993 sumiko higashi	91
6. modernism and the narrative of nation in jfk robert burgoyne	113
7. andrei rublev: the medieval epic as post-utopian history denise j. youngblood	127
8. subject positions, speaking positions: from holocaust, our hitler, and heimat to shoah and schindler’s list thomas elsasser	145

part three: the end(s) of history

9.	historical ennui, feminist boredom	187
	patrice petro
10.	the future of the past: film and the beginnings of postmodern history	201
	robert a. rosenstone
11.	interrotroning history: errol morris and the documentary of the future	219
	shawn rosenheim
12.	the professors of history	235
	dana polan
	contributors	257
	index	259