

CONTENTS

Preface:
On Hybridity and Rereading	ix
Acknowledgments	xix

PART I: Finding Atlantis—and Growing into Feminism

Becoming a Feminist Together—and Apart: Notes on Collaboration and Identity	3
Finding Atlantis: Thirty Years of Exploring Women's Literary Traditions in English	24
What Do Feminist Critics Want? Or, A Postcard from the Volcano	43
The Education of Henrietta Adams	63
A Tarantella of Theory: Hélène Cixous' and Catherine Clément's Newly Born Woman	75
Reflections on a (Feminist) Discourse of Discourse, or, Look, Ma, I'm Talking!	88

PART II: Reading and Rereading Women's Writing

"My Name Is Darkness": The Poetry of Self-Definition	99
"A Fine, White Flying Myth": The Life/Work of Sylvia Plath	114

The Wayward Nun Beneath the Hill: Emily Dickinson and the Mysteries of Womanhood	134
Jane Eyre and the Secrets of Furious Lovemaking	160
The Key to Happiness: On Frances Hodgson Burnett's The Secret Garden	187
"Dare You See a Soul at the White Heat? ": Thoughts on a "Little Home-keeping Person"	198
PART III: Mother Rites: Maternity, Matriarchy, Creativity
From Patria to Matria : Elizabeth Barrett Browning's Risorgimento	211
"Life's Empty Pack": Notes Toward a Literary Daughteronomy	243
Potent Griselda: Male Modernists and the Great Mother	274
Mother Rites: Maternity, Matriarchy, Creativity	306
Notes	345
Bibliography	365