

Contents

Preface	page xi
1 Introduction: the concept of Inner Asia	1
DENIS SINOR Indiana University
2 The geographic setting	19
ROBERT N. TAAFFE Indiana University
General geographic characteristics	19
The natural zones of Inner Asia	27
Tundra	31
Forest zone	32
Steppe zones	33
Desert zone	37
3 Inner Asia at the dawn of history	41
A. P. OKLADNIKOV formerly of Novosibirsk Translated by Julia Crookenden
4 The Scythians and Sarmatians	97
A. I. MELYUKOVA Institute of Archaeology, Academy of Sciences of the USSR Translated by Julia Crookenden
The Scythians	97
The Sarmatians	110

5	The Hsiung-nu	118
	YING-SHIH YÜ Princeton University
	The rise of Motun	120
	The Hsiung-nu and the Han under the Ho-ch'in treaties	122
	The Hsiung-nu and their non-Chinese neighbors	125
	The Han offensive	128
	The struggle for the Western Regions	131
	The Hsiung-nu lose control of Western Regions	133
	Regionalism and leadership crisis	135
	From split to submission	138
	The final split: the Southern and Northern Hsiung-nu	141
	The Southern Hsiung-nu under the Han tributary system	143
	The Northern Hsiung-nu	144
6	Indo-Europeans in Inner Asia	151
	A. K. NARAIN University of Wisconsin
7	The Hun period	177
	DENIS SINOR
8	The Avars	206
	SAMUEL SZÁDECZKY-KARDOSS University of Szeged
	The written sources	206
	The peoples and languages of the Avar state	221
	The archeological evidence	225
9	The peoples of the Russian forest belt	229
	PETER B. GOLDEN Rutgers State University
	The early Uralic community	230
	The Finno-Ugrians	232
	The Oghur Turks and Volga Bulgaria	234
	The origins and development of the Hungarians	242
	The formation of the Hungarians	243
	Extinct peoples of the Middle Volga region	248
	The Volga Finnic peoples	250

	The Permians	252
	The Ob-Ugrians	253
10	The peoples of the south Russian steppes	256
	PETER B. GOLDEN
	The Ponto-Caspian steppes after Attila	256
	The advent of the Oghur tribes	257
	The Sabirs	259
	Avars and Türks	260
	Magna Bulgaria	261
	The Khazars	263
	The Pechenegs	270
	The Oghuz (Torki) in the south Russian steppes	275
	The Cumans	277
11	The establishment and dissolution of the Türk empire	285
	DENIS SINOR
	Early mentions of Türks	285
	Origin of Türks; Türk subgroups	287
	Türks and the Juan-juan	291
	The founding of the first Türk kaghanate	297
	Byzantine–Türk relations	301
	The partition of the Türk state	305
	The Western Türks	308
	The second Türk kaghanate	310
	Epilogue	313
12	The Uighurs	317
	COLIN MACKERRAS
	School of Modern Asian Studies, Griffith University, Australia
	Ethnic composition, territorial extent and administration	320
	Religion	329
	Social change	335
13	The Karakhanids and early Islam	343
	PETER B. GOLDEN
	The Turkic steppe in early Sāmānid times	348
	The Sāmānids and Islam in Central Asia	352

	The origins of the Karakhanids	354
	The later Sāmānids and the steppe tribes	358
	The Oghuz yabghu state and the Saljuk origins	361
	The Karakhanid–Ghaznavid wars and the Saljuks	362
	The Saljuks in Central Asia	365
14	Early and medieval Tibet	371
	HELMUT HOFFMAN
	Indiana University
	Pre- and early history	371
	The rise of the Tibetan empire	376
	The period of the regency	379
	The zenith of the Tibetan empire: Khri-srong Ide-brtsan (755–97)	382
	The decline and disintegration of the empire	385
	Administration and social structure during the empire	389
	The “dark period” (850–1000) and the “second introduction of Buddhism”	392
	Development of the theocratic state: Tibet and the world empire of the Mongols	395
	Decline of the Sa-skya power and the rule of Phag-mo-gru- pa	397
15	The forest peoples of Manchuria: Kitans and Jurchens	400
	HERBERT FRANKE
	University of Munich
	The Kitans	401
	The Jurchens	412
	Bibliography	424
	Index	495