

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Preface	xiii

I Freeing Culture from Eurocentrism 1

1. Moving the Centre: Towards a Pluralism of Cultures	2
2. Creating Space for a Hundred Flowers to Bloom: The Wealth of a Common Global Culture	12
3. The Universality of Local Knowledge	25
4. Imperialism of Language: English, a Language for the World?	30
5. Cultural Dialogue for a New World	42
6. The Cultural Factor in the Neo-colonial Era	47

II Freeing Culture from Colonial Legacies 59

7. The Writer in a Neo-colonial State	60
8. Resistance to Damnation: The Role of Intellectual Workers	76
9. The Role of the Scholar in the Development of African Literatures	82
10. Post-colonial Politics and Culture	88

vii

Contents

	11. In Moi's Kenya, History is Subversive	96
	12. From the Corridors of Silence: The Exile Writes Back	102
	13. Imperialism and Revolution: Movements for Social Change	109
III	Freeing Culture from Racism	115
	14. The Ideology of Racism: War on Peace Within and Among Nations	116
	15. Racism in Literature	126
	16. Her Cook, her Dog: Karen Blixen's Africa	132
	17. Biggles, Mau Mau and I	136
	18. Black Power in Britain	142
	19. Many Years Walk to Freedom: Welcome Home Mandela!	146
IV	Matigari, Dreams and Nightmares	153
	20. Life, Literature and a Longing for Home	154
	21. Matigari, and the Dreams of One East Africa	159
	Index	179
