

CONTENTS

General editors' preface	page v
List of maps and tables	xiv
Preface to volume I	xvii
List of abbreviations	xxiii
Official titles and institutional terms	xxv
Han weights and measures	xxxviii
Han emperors	xxxix
Introduction	I
by MICHAEL LOEWE, University of Cambridge
The written sources and their problems	2
Archeological evidence	7
Historical scholarship	10
Characteristic developments of the early empires	14
I The state and empire of Ch'in	20
by DERK BODDE, Professor Emeritus, University of Pennsylvania
Political and social background	21
The state of Ch'in: the early centuries (897 ? –361 B.C.)	30
The adoption of reforms (361–338 B.C.)	34
Military growth (338–250 B.C.)	38
Final conquests and triumph (250–221 B.C.)	40
Reasons for the triumph	45
The Ch'in empire: reforms, achievements, excesses (221–210 B.C.)	52
Intellectual currents during the empire	72
The collapse of Ch'in (210–206 B.C.)	81
Reasons for the collapse	85
Appendix I: Sources and modern studies	90

	Appendix 2: Interpolations in the Shih-chi	94
	Appendix 3: Statistics in the Shih-chi and elsewhere	98
2	The Former Han dynasty by MICHAEL LOEWE	103
	The pattern of political history	103
	The founding of the dynasty (210-195 B.C.)	110
	The consolidation of the empire (195-141 B.C.)	128
	The full force of modernist policies (141-87 B.C.)	152
	The years of transition (87-49 B.C.)	179
	Reform and decline (49 B.C.-A.D. 6)	198
3	Wang Mang, the restoration of the Han dynasty, and Later Han by HANS BIELENSTEIN, Columbia University	223
	The rise of Wang Mang	224
	The reign of Wang Mang (A.D. 9-23)	232
	The restoration of the Han dynasty	240
	The Later Han dynasty	251
4	The conduct of government and the issues at stake (A.D. 57-167) by MICHAEL LOEWE	291
	The reigns of Ming-ti and Chang-ti (A.D. 57-88)	292
	The reigns of Ho-ti, Shang-ti, and An-ti (A.D. 88-125)	297
	The reign of Shun-ti (A.D. 126-144)	305
	The reign of Huan-ti (A.D. 146-168)	311
5	The fall of Han by B. J. MANSVELT BECK, Sinological Institute, University of Leiden	317
	The crisis of 168	317
	The reign of Ling-ti (A.D. 168-189)	323
	The collapse of dynastic power	341
	The fall of Han in perspective	357
6	Han foreign relations by YÜ YING-SHIH, Yale University	377
	The world order of Han China: theory and practice	377
	The Hsiung-nu	383
	The Western Regions	405

	The Ch'iang	422
	The eastern barbarians: Wu-huan and Hsien-pi	436
	The Korean peninsula	446
	The south (Nan-yüeh)	451
	The southeast (Min-yüeh)	455
	The southwest	457
	Contacts with the Mediterranean world	460
7	The structure and practice of government by MICHAEL LOEWE	463
	The civil service	463
	The central government	466
	Provincial and local government	470
	The armed forces	479
	The practice of government	482
8	The institutions of Later Han by HANS BIELENSTEIN	491
	The central government	491
	The local administration	506
	The army	512
	Civil service recruitment	515
	Power in government	517
	Conclusion	519
9	Ch'in and Han law by A. F. P. HULSEWÉ, Professor Emeritus, Leiden University	520
	Sources	520
	General principles	522
	The codes	525
	The judicial authorities	528
	The judicial process	531
	Forms of punishment	532
	Administrative rules	536
	Private law	541
10	The economic and social history of Former Han by NISHIJIMA SADAŌ, Professor Emeritus, University of Tokyo	545
	Rural society and the development of agricultural techniques	551

	The development of cities, commerce, and manufacturing	574
	Financial administration	591
11	The economic and social history of Later Han by PATRICIA EBREY, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign	608
	Economic history	608
	Social history	626
12	The religious and intellectual background by MICHAEL LOEWE	649
	Literary sources and classification schemes	649
	The developments of four centuries	653
	Mythology	657
	Religious beliefs and practices	661
	Mantic beliefs and practices	673
	The universe and its order	683
	Ethical principles and the organization of man	703
	Immortality and services to the dead	715
13	The concept of sovereignty by MICHAEL LOEWE	726
	Changing attitudes: 221 B.C. to A.D. 220	726
	The institution of rulership	729
	Ethical values and the failings of Ch'in	731
	Tung Chung-shu	733
	The Mandate of Heaven: Pan Piao's essay	735
	The choice of the patron element	737
	The views of Wang Ch'ung and Wang Fu	739
	The debt to Ch'in and Wang Mang	740
	The dignity of the throne	740
	The role and functions of the emperor	743
14	The development of the Confucian schools by ROBERT P. KRAMERS, University of Zürich	747
	The ancient traditions: proponents and documents	747
	Idealistic and rationalist attitudes	749
	Tsou Yen	750
	The intellectual policy of the Ch'in empire	751
	Attention to Confucian values	752

	Tung Chung-Shu's syncretism	753
	The Five Classics	754
	The growth of the schools and official scholarship	756
15	Confucian, Legalist, and Taoist thought in Later Han by CH'EN CH'I-YÜN, University of California, Santa Barbara	766
	Former Han and Wang Mang: the heritage	767
	Later Han	779
	The breakdown of central authority	795
	The value of Later Han thought	806
16	Philosophy and religion from Han to Sui by the late PAUL DEMIÉVILLE, Collège de France	808
	The decline of philosophy during Later Han	808
	Popular Taoism at the end of the Han dynasty	815
	The introduction of Buddhism	820
	The philosophical revival of the third century	826
	Buddhist and Taoist gnōsis	838
	Buddhism under the southern and northern dynasties	846
	Taoism under the southern and northern dynasties	860
	Buddhism and Taoism under the Sui dynasty	868
	Postscript to Chapter 16 by TIMOTHY BARRETT, University of London	873
	Bibliography	879
	Glossary-index	921