contents

	page
Tables and Figures	vii
Abbreviations	ix
New preface by the author	xi
Introduction by Peter Mair	xiii
Preface	xxi
PART ONE: THE RATIONALE: WHY PARTIES?	1
Chapter one: The party as part	3
1. From faction to party	3
2. Pluralism	12
3. Responsible and responsive government	16
4. A rationalisation	21
Chapter two: The party as whole	35
1. No-party versus one-party	35
2. The party-state system	38
3. One-party pluralism	42
Chapter three: The preliminary framework	50
1. Channelment, communication, expression	50
2. The minimal definition	52
3. An overview	57
Chapter four: The party from within	63
1. Fractions, factions, and tendencies	63
2. A scheme of analysis	66
3. Southern politics: 'Factions' without parties?	72
4. Italy and Japan: Fractions within parties	78
5. The structure of opportunities	82
6. From party to faction	92

Sartori, Giovanni
Parties and party systems
2005

digitalisiert durch:
IDS Luzern

PART TWO: PARTY SYSTEMS 103

Chapter five: The numerical criterion 105
1. The issue 105
2. Rules for counting 107
3. A two-dimensional mapping 110

Chapter six: Competitive systems 116
1. Polarised pluralism 116
2. Testing the cases 128
3. Moderate pluralism and segmented societies 154
4. Twoparty systems 164
5. Predominant-party systems 171

Chapter seven: Non-competitive systems 193
1. Where competition ends 193
2. Single party 197
3. Hegemonic party 204

Chapter eight: Fluid polities and quasi-parties 217
1. Methodological cautions 217
2. The African labyrinth 221
3. Ad hoc categorising 226
4. The boomerang effect 236

Chapter nine: The overall framework 243
1. System change, continuum, and discontinuities 243
2. Mapping function and explanatory power 251
3. From classification to measurement 261
4. Measuring relevance 267
5. Numbers and size: The index of fractionalisation 271
6. Combining the nominal and mathematical routes 281

Chapter ten: Spatial competition 289
1. The Downsian theory revisited 289
2. Issues, identification, images, and positions 292
3. Multidimensional, unidimensional, and ideological space 297
4. The direction of competition 305

Index 319