

Contents

List of Illustrations xi

Abbreviations xiii

Preface xv

Introduction: Then and Now 1

I. From Epiphany to Episode: A Revolution in the Description of Dreams 23

Epiphany or Messenger Dreams—Definition and Origin of the Epiphany Dream—Varieties of the Epiphany Dream—Distinguishing the Epiphany Dream from the Modern Dream—Other Kinds of Greek and Roman Dream Reports—The Force of Convention—Actual Epiphany Dreams?—The Epiphany Dream in Danger—Galen and Aelius Aristides—Late-antique Stimuli—Epiphany Dreams in the Middle Ages—The Late-medieval and Early-modern Demise—Explaining the Change

II. Greek and Roman Dreams That Were Really Dreamt 91

Is This Tale Tall?—An Essential Question—The Matter of Authenticity—The Problem of Memory—Dream-like Dreams—Mendacious Historians and Biographers—Some Strong Candidates—Perpetua—Artemidorus—Constantine—Augustine—Aelius Aristides—Writing Good Stories

III. Greek and Roman Opinions about the Truthfulness of Dreams	123
What They Believed and What We Believe—Truth—Belief—The Interpreters—Metaphors—The Greeks before the Sophists—Fifth-century Athens—Ordinary and Extraordinary Athenians in the Fourth Century—Plato and Aristotle—Hellenistic Impressions—Predictive Dreams in the Context of Greek Divination—The Roman Republic down to Sulla—Lucretius, Cicero, and the Late Republic—Incubation and the Doctors—Augustus to the Flavians—A Victory for Religion? 100–250 AD—What Dreams Were Good for under the Roman Empire—Late Antiquity—A Conclusion
IV. Naturalistic Explanations	229
Introduction—The Origins of Naturalistic Thinking about Dreams—The Preplatonic Philosophers—‘Hippocratic’ Doctors—Back to Plato—Aristotle Uncertain—The Epicureans—Other Hellenistic Voices—The Reasons for a Failure—A Note on Galen—What Does a Swallow Mean?—A Complete Halt
Conclusions	279
Bibliography	287
Index	321