

Table of contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Foreword	ix
INTRODUCTION
The evaluation of literary texts: A new perspective Willie van Peer	1
PART I
Textual and generic comparisons
CHAPTER 1
Canon formation: Ideology or aesthetic quality? Willie van Peer	17
CHAPTER 2
Why Hugh Maccoll is not, and will never be, part of any literary canon Stein Haugom Olsen	31
CHAPTER 3
Popular / Canonical: The case of The Secret Agent Jan Gorak	53
CHAPTER 4
Literary evaluation and poetic form: Poetic form and creative tension Tom Barney	71
CHAPTER 5
Poetic value: Political value Laurence Lerner	83
CHAPTER 6
“Too soon transplanted”: Coleridge and the forms of dislocation David S. Miall	95

CHAPTER 7

Evaluation and stylistic analysis

117

Mick Short and Elena Semino

CHAPTER 8

The value of Juvenal

139

Walter Nash

PART II

Theoretical reflections

CHAPTER 9

Some correlates of literary eminence

159

Colin Martindale

CHAPTER 10

Macbeth through the computer: Literary evaluation and pedagogical implications

169

Sonia Zyngier

CHAPTER 11

How scientific can literary evaluation be? Arguments and experiments

191

Harald Fricke

CHAPTER 12

Philosophical perspectives on literary value

209

Paisley Livingston

CHAPTER 13

The qualities of literatures: A concept of literary evaluation
in pluralistic societies

223

Renate von Heydebrand and Simone Winko

Author index

241

Subject index

243