

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abbreviations	i
Foreword: Professor John Parkin	iii
Preface	vii
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: A brief historical survey of comic theory	1
Laughter as the property of Man	1
How we laugh: The physiology of laughter	2
The benefits of laughter: Its relationship to physical health	4
The cathartic value of laughter	5
Why we laugh: Satire as a social or political corrective	7
Fun and incongruity	9
Saturnalia and carnival	13
Bergson's mechanical model	14
The Freudian school of thought	16
Humour and the emotions	18
Recurrent themes: Conflicting emotions	20
Dual roles	20
Relief from constraint	21
Superiority	22
The cruelty of laughter	23
The purpose of laughter	24
Conclusion	24
1 Marot, a poet of his time?	25
Early training	25
Stock comic characters: Traditional names	28
Voracious women	35
Parasites	37
Monks	41
Satire of the Church, its doctrines and hierarchy	45
Satire of the judicial system	47
Use of allegory	48
The significance of colours	49
Official poetry	51

The poet's status		55
Conclusion		60
2 The consummate wordsmith		61
Metre, poetic form and rhyme		61
Neologisms		64
Repetition and lists		68
Punning and onomastics		71
Word games: the rebus and polysemy		75
Intertextual allusion: Villon		80
Intratextual allusion and the running gag: The dispute with Sagon		89
The Les Gracieux Adieux affair		92
Marot the 'rat pelé'		96
Eating meat in Lent		97
The veaux of the Sorbonne		99
Conclusion		100
3 Spinning yarns and telling jokes		101
The hard luck tale:	Pour avoir esté desrobé	102
	Marot Prisonnier escript au Roy	107
The bawdy tale:	Epistles for Captains Bourgeon and Raisin	111
Sensory appeal:	Frippelippes and Sagon	115
	Sagon as an arquebus	118
	Marot's escape from Bordeaux	119
Old age and self ridicule		121
Deflecting criticism		124
Delivering the punchline		127
Ribaldry in the epigram		131
Translations of Martial's epigrams		134
The étrennes		142
Conclusion		144
4 The wise fool		147
The alazon :	In Marot Prisonnier escript au Roy	148
	Sagon as alazon	148
	Sagon's poetry	152
	The theologians of the Sorbonne	156
	The Dames de Paris	159
	The Pope as alazon in L'Enfer	163
The naïve iron		165
The parodic eulogy and the ironic tribute		166
Humility		171
Eiron and alazon together		173
Conclusion		176

5 Ambiguity and deniability	179
The role of wordplay	179
Names and wordplay	180
Bawdy punning	184
False connectives	189
Appearance versus reality	194
The triple bluff	197
Prudent silence	197
Was Marot guilty of eating meat in Lent?	200
Use of proverbs	204
Feigned innocence	207
Ambiguity and self-protection	209
Conclusion	209
6 Comedy, cruelty and compassion	211
The put-down	213
Real versus imaginary suffering: the pain of ridicule	218
Black humour: intensifying the impact	221
Pathos and humour	225
Marot's view of war	230
Conclusion	235
7 Towards a definition of Marotic humour	237
Nature:	Élégant badinage? 237
	Traditional influences 239
	The serious business of comedy 241
	Features and origins of the coq-à-l'asne 243
	Techniques 250
Function:	Gaining a living 251
	Indulging a sense of the comic 254
	Evolving a personal voice 255
	Adaptation of traditional themes 256
	Ambiguity as veil for satire 258
	Group solidarity 258
	Catharsis and correction 259
Conclusion	261
Bibliography	263
Index nominum	281
Index operum	References to Clément Marot's poetry 287