

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Foreword, in Lieu of an Introduction	ix
1 Toward a Phenomenology of Urban Gothic: The Example of Dickens	1
2 Houses, Homes, Rooms and Tombs: The Unhomely Spaces and Monstrous Economies of Dombey and Son	21
3 In Visibility, or the Appearance of 'True Histories': Truth, Confession and Revelation in Anne Brontë	43
4 Contested Grounds: Historical, Epistemological and Political Identities in Nineteenth-Century Literature	63
5 (Sub) Urbi et Orbi: The 'Little Worlds' of London, or, Fear, Whimsy and Singularity	97
6 Professions: Of English Diaspora?	111
7 No, Not, None, Nothing, Nobody: Place, Pattern, Death and Narratives of Negation in Dubliners	131
8 'A self-referential density': Glyph , Fictions of Transgression and the 'Theory' Thing	141
9 'Theory' & the novel (and The Novel?)	161
10 Ghosts: Of Ourselves, or, Drifting with Hardy and Heidegger	179
11 The Reiterable Circularity Of Being: Poetics, Selfhood and the Singular Witness that is 'I'	197

12	Teaching Derrida: 'but just a minute, before we begin, a preface of sorts (after the event), a defence, apologia, apologue . . .', and other responses in the face of (yet another) programmed avoidance of reading	213
13	'The strong dead return': Harold Bloom's Daemonic Shades	239
14	Face to Face with Agamben or, the Other in Love	255
15	Responsibilities of J , or, Aphorism's Other: Criticism's Transformation	267
	Endnotes	277
	Bibliography	285
	Index of Proper Names	301