

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	1
1 A Topography of 'Woman'	11
2 Clitoridectomy and Gikuyu Nationalism	33
3 The Landscape of Insurgency	61
4 Reading against the Grain (of Wheat)	85
5 Paternity, Illegitimacy and Intertextuality	117
6 The Neocolony as a Prostituted Economy	151
Conclusion – Prostituting Translation: An Ethics of Postcolonial Reading	191
Bibliography	203
Index	211