

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	VII
Introduction	1
Modernism and Women Writers.....	3
The Texts and their Authors	8
Theoretical Framework and Structure	12
1. Power and Resistance: Identity Takes Place	15
Power and Repression in Michel Foucault's The History of Sexuality	15
Containment and Subversion: The New Historicist Approach	20
Productive Consumption: Certeau's Practices of Everyday Life	23
Power, Resistance and Modern Women.....	27
2. Becoming a Subject – Playing a Part	31
What's a Girl to Do? The Situation of the Feminine Subject.....	33
Troubling Identity: Judith Butler, Sex, Gender and Performance.....	34
Feminine Masquerade and the Power of Performance	39
Playing One's Part or Being Out Of Character?	45
3. “A Damned Egotistical Self”: Dorothy Richardson's Pilgrimage	47
Identity Construction in Pilgrimage	50
Miriam's Active Consumption of Culture	54
A Feminine Prose? Pilgrimage as a Woman's Text.....	66
Becoming a Writer – Is the Text the Goal?.....	78
4. “Encore une grue”: Jean Rhys's Early Fiction	82
Masquerade and Identity: After Leaving Mr Mackenzie and Good Morning, Midnight	85
It's a Jungle Out There: Quartet and Voyage in the Dark	99
5. “Acknowledge Us, Oh God, before the Whole World ...”: Radclyffe Hall	114
“Miss Ogilvy Find Herself”: Longing to Belong.....	118
In or Out of the Closet: Identity and Masquerade in The Well of Loneliness	126
Dangerous Mothers and Sinful Sisters: Feminine Women in Hall's Fiction	136
6. A Space of One's Own: Places, Identity and Modernity	143
Foucault's Other Spaces.....	144
Powerful Pedestrians: Certeau's Rhetoric of Walking.....	148
The Modern City	151

7. “A West End Life of her Own”:
Space in Dorothy Richardson’s Pilgrimage	164
The Horrors of Domesticity: Domestic Spaces in Pilgrimage	165
“Not a Woman, a Londoner”: Miriam and the Big City	174
Green Worlds: Oberland and Dimple Hill	180
8. Sex and the City: Spaces in Jean Rhys’s Early Fiction	194
“Funny how it’s slipped away”:
The European Metropolis as Heterotopia in “Vienne”	195
Stage and Market Place:
Display, Performance and Consumption in Rhys’s Urban Spaces	204
Visions of the Caribbean: Exotic Spaces in Jean Rhys	212
9. “Forever England”: Space in Radclyffe Hall	220
No Room Of One’s Own – The Unlit Lamp	220
Utopia of the Mind – City of the Body:
The (Impossible) City in The Unlit Lamp	226
Paradise Lost – The Rural and the Urban in The Well of Loneliness	233
10. Summary and Conclusions	248
Notes	255
Bibliography	281