

Contents

Foreword: 'Taught by Love' Martin McQuillan	vii
Notes on Contributors	ix
Introduction: The Origins of Deconstruction – Derrida's Daughters Ika Willis	1
Prologue
A. 'Between the writing body and writing . . .': Jacques Derrida An interview with Daniel Ferrer	9
B. 'I am an archreader': Hélène Cixous An interview with Daniel Ferrer	22
Part I Incubation
1 Dating – Deconstruction Marc Froment-Meurice	41
2 The Course of a General Displacement, or, the Course of the Choreographer Lynn Turner	50
3 Feminine Endings: Dido's Telephonic Body and the Originary Function of the Hymen Ika Willis	67
4 On Prejudice and Foretelling 2 Thomas Docherty	83
5 Extremes Meet Jean-Michel Rabaté	97
Part II Inauguration
6 The Opening to Infinity: Derrida's Quasi-transcendentals Claire Colebrook	119

7	Splitting the Origin: Writing and Responsibility Margret Grebowicz	143
8	Derridean Beginning and Deleuzian Becoming Paul Patton	159
9	'Words of Air': On Breath and Inspiration Claudia Baracchi	173
Part III Installation
10	Illegibility: On the Spirit of Origins John P. Leavey Jr	195
11	Origins of Deconstruction? Deconstruction, That Which Arrives (If It Arrives) Julian Wolfreys	211
12	Philosophy of Cinders and Cinders of Philosophy: A Commentary on the Origins of Deconstruction and the Holocaust Robert Eaglestone	226
13	The Beginnings of Art: Heidegger and Bataille Gérard Bucher	244
14	Aesthetic Allegory: Reading Hegel after Bernal Martin McQuillan	255
	Index	280