

Contents

Series Editor's Foreword	vii
Copyright Permissions	ix
Introduction: Beckett in History, Memory, Archive Seán Kennedy	1
1 Does Beckett Studies Require a Subject? Mourning Ireland in the Texts for Nothing Seán Kennedy	11
2 Between Gospel and Prohibition: Beckett in Nazi Germany 1936–1937 Mark Nixon	31
3 Beckett's "Brilliant Obscurantics": Watt and the Problem of Propaganda James McNaughton	47
4 Beckett's Theatre "After Auschwitz" Jackie Blackman	71
5 "Faintly Struggling Things": Trauma, Testimony, and Inscrutable Life in Beckett's The Unnamable Alysia E. Garrison	89
6 Samuel Beckett, the Archive, and the Problem of History Robert Reginio	111
7 Archives of the End: Embodied History in Samuel Beckett's Plays Jonathan Boulter	129

8	“... Humanity in Ruins...”: The Historical Body in Samuel Beckett’s Fiction Katherine Weiss	151
9	Writing Relics: Mapping the Composition History of Beckett’s Endgame Dirk Van Hulle	169
10	“Agnostic Quietism” and Samuel Beckett’s Early Development Matthew Feldman	183
	Bibliography	201
	List of Contributors	215
	Index	219