

Contents

Acknowledgements	xiii
Abbreviations and referencing	xv

Introduction 1

I: Life and contexts 3

Introduction	5
Early years 1844–63	6
University 1863–67	8
Catholicism	15
After Oxford: Catholicism and vocation 1867–68	18
The Society of Jesus	20
Religious training 1868–77	23
Hopkins: Modern or Victorian?	28
'The Wreck' and its consequences 1876–77	29
Ministry 1877–81	30
The final phase 1881–89	34
'The war within'	37
'Glory is the flame': typhoid and death	38
Further reading	40

2: Work 41

Introduction	43
The early poetry to 1868: introduction	44
The early poetry: schooldays 1854–63	44
' The Escorial ' (1860)	44
' A Vision of the Mermaids ' (1862)	45
' Winter with the Gulf Stream ' (1863)	46

The early poetry: university student 1863–68	47
Religious poetry	47
‘Pilate’ (1864) – ‘Soliloquy of One of the Spies’ (1864)	48
St Dorothea (1864–1868)	49
‘Barnfloor and Winepress’	50
‘Heaven-Haven’ (1864) – ‘The Habit of Perfection’ (1866)	51
Dramatic poetry	52
Dramatic poetry: Floris in Italy	53
People and personalities	54
People and personalities: ‘Where Art Thou Friend’ (1865)	54
People and personalities: ‘The Alchemist in the City’ (1865)	55
People and personalities: ‘The Earth and Heaven’ (1866)	56
Early poetry: nature and symbolism	57
Nature and symbolism: ‘Spring and Death’ (?1863)	58
Early poetry: responses and reflections	58
Responses and reflections: ‘The Queen’s Crowning’ (1864) – ‘The Nightingale’ (1866)	59
Journals	61
Mature poetry: ‘The Wreck of the Deutschland’	64
‘The Wreck’: introduction	64
‘The Wreck’: storm and duality	65
‘The Wreck’ as Ode	66
‘The Wreck’: structure and stanza	66
‘The Wreck’ – a new rhythm: reading Hopkins	67
‘The Wreck’: Part the First	69
‘The Wreck’: Part the Second	73
Celebration, exultation – and taint: poems 1876–78	79
Occasional poems	79
Sonnets 1877	80
Sonnets 1877: observation and grace	80
Sonnets 1877: ‘The Windhover’ (1877)	84
Sermons and Devotional Writings: 1879–89	86
Sermons 1879–81	86
Devotional Writings 1880–89	87
Major production 1878–86: God, Nature and Mankind	89
‘The Loss of the Eurydice’ (1878)	89
Oxford 1878–79: memory and experience	91
Marian Devotion	92
‘The May Magnificat’ (1878) – ‘The Blessed Virgin Compared to the Air We Breathe’ (1883)	93
God’s creation 1879–82	94
‘Andromeda’ (1879)	95
Green Hopkins?	96
Priestly responsibilities	98

Mortal beauty	99
Parishioners and other people	102
'Spring and Fall' (1880)	103
Winefred, Echo, Sibyl	104
The 'Terrible' Sonnets: 1885–86	107
The 'Terrible' Sonnets	107
The 'Terrible' Sonnets: the Dark Night of the Soul	109
The 'Terrible' Sonnets: distress and disgust	110
The 'Terrible' Sonnets: 'Carrion Comfort'	112
Soldier, ploughman, navy	115
Final poems: 'Fresh Woods'	117
The Letters	122
Further reading	124

3: Criticism

125

Introduction	127
Earliest readers	128
Hopkins as critic	129
Hopkins: poet in waiting	130
Coming to know Hopkins: 1935–60	133
Hopkins as Modern: 1918–30	134
Hopkins as Modern: 1930–60	137
Hopkins as Victorian	141
Hopkins the Victorian: responses 1917–40	141
Hopkins the Victorian: the biographical shaping 1930–92	142
Hopkins the Victorian: critical approaches 1944–72	149
Nature into religion	153
Nature	153
Nature and aesthetics	155
Nature: glory and darkness	157
Science out of nature	158
Religion	162
Anglican and Tractarian?	165
Tractarian into Catholic	166
Sacramentalism: the Incarnation	166
Husk and kernel	167
Christ's figure and nature	168
The poet as Jesuit	169
The meditative tradition: Ignatius and the Exercises	170
The meditative tradition: the Ignatian spirit	171
Experience into technique	172
Technique	172
Technique: formal analysis	173

Technique: diction and syntax	176
Technique: patterns of sound	177
Technique: form and tradition	178
Form and tradition: the Classics	179
Technique: 'instress stressed'	180
Technique: themes and imagery	181
Readings	182
Reading 'The Wreck': the Ode	183
Reading 'The Wreck': Catholic or Jesuit?	185
Reading 'The Wreck': the nun	187
Reading 'The Windhover'	188
Reading 'The Windhover': Christ, Nature and Sacrament	188
Reading 'The Windhover': the kestrel	190
Reading 'The Windhover': 'buckle'	191
Reading The 'Terrible' Sonnets	192
The 'Terrible' Sonnets: psychoanalysis and religion	193
The 'Terrible' Sonnets: subjectivity and artistry	193
The 'Terrible' Sonnets: tragic or comic?	194
Shaping the reputation	195
Mid-century: the 1940s	196
Mid-century: 1968 to 1978	197
Conclusion: new directions 1992–2008	198
Further reading	203
Chronology	204
Bibliography	206
Index	213