

Contents

List of Tables	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
1. Patterns of Youth and Age	19
The very young man: Partonopeus	22
The older woman and the very young girl: Melior and Persewis	32
The older man and his doubles: Gaudin, the packhorse knight and Ernoul	39
More young men: Anselot and Lucion	44
2. Power, Birth and Values: The filz à vilain Theme	50
A programme for reading: the prologue	52
The filz à vilain defeated: Sornegur and Marés	59
Ambivalent recurrences: the bishop of Paris and Farés	68
3. Walter Map and Other Animals	75
A horse, a lion and the Roman de Thèbes	76
Anselot's tirade: context and content	84
Creatures too close for comfort	91
Ten ravening beasts	96
The Walter Map connection	102
4. Experiments in Fiction: Anselot's Story	112
The manuscript tradition and authorship of Anselot's story	115
An exemplary fusion	127
Doubling and mis en abyme	139
5. When is an Ending not an Ending? Questions of Closure	150
The first continuation?	153
The Sultan: a real-life enemy figure	157
The ending of the Continuation	162

6. Poets and a Patroness: The Making of Partonopeus de Blois	179
Form and fusion: the Roman d'Alexandre and Florimont	179
The mysterious disappearance of Urraque	187
Passe Rose: beloved patroness?	192
Conclusion	207
Appendix 1: Notes on Editions and Manuscripts	215
Appendix 2: Synopsis	218
Bibliography	229
Index	251