

Contents

Josef Trappel, Hannu Nieminen & Lars Nord Editorial	7
Chapter 1 Josef Trappel Why Democracy Needs Media Monitoring	11
Chapter 2 André Donk & Josef Trappel Indicators and Definitions	29
Chapter 3 Beate Josephi Australia: Committed to Investigative Journalism	51
Chapter 4 Manuela Grünangerl & Josef Trappel Austria: Informal Rules and Strong Traditions	79
Chapter 5 Kari Karppinen, Hannu Nieminen & Anna-Laura Markkanen Finland: High Professional Ethos in a Small, Concentrated Media Market	113
Chapter 6 Frank Marcinkowski & André Donk Germany: The News Media are Still Able to Play a Supportive Role for Democracy	143
Chapter 7 Auksė Balčytienė Lithuania: Mixed Professional Values in a Small and Highly Blurred Media Environment	175

Chapter 8
Leen d'Haenens & Quint Kik
The Netherlands: Although There is No Need for Dramatization, Vigilance is Required	203
Chapter 9
Joaquim Fidalgo
Portugal: A Young Democracy Still in Progress	235
Chapter 10
Torbjörn von Krogh & Lars Nord
Sweden: A Mixed Media Model under Market Pressures	265
Chapter 11
Werner A. Meier, Alexandra Gmür & Martina Leonarz
Switzerland: Swiss Quality Media. A Reduced Protection Forest for Democracy	289
Chapter 12
Peter Humphreys
UK: UK News Media and Democracy. Professional Autonomy and its Limits	319
Chapter 13
Lars Nord, Hannu Nieminen & Josef Trappel
Democratic Functions under Pressure: Conclusions	347
The Authors	365