

Contents

List of tables	xii
Abbreviations	xiii
Pronunciation guide	xv
A note on terminology and measures	xvi
Maps	xviii
Genealogical table	xxii

Introduction	1
1 The Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth	2
2 The Polish Revolution, the Catholic Church, and the historians	6
3 Decision-making in a republican polity	14

PART I PLUNDER

1. The Commonwealth and the Catholic Church in 1788	27
1 The bishop and bishopric of Cracow	27
2 The sejmiks of August 1788	35
3 The instructions of 1788	41
4 A comparison with the cahiers de doléances	46
5 'An ill humour against the clergy'	49
2. The republican revolution	52
1 The inauguration and confederation of the sejm	52
2 The army and the Military Department: 13 October–3 November 1788	53
3 The 'public' in revolutionary Warsaw	57
4 Casting off the Russian guarantee: 5 November 1788–19 January 1789	60
5 The implications for the Catholic Church	63
3. The first wave of ecclesiastical polemics (to the summer of 1789)	65
1 Staszic, Nax, Kołłątaj	65
2 Ecclesiastical temporalities and public utility	70
3 The patriotic paradigm	77
4. Tax or offering?	79
1 The episcopal response to the threat	79
2 'Who is poorer than the Fatherland?' 12–16 March 1789	82
3 Disputes over tax reductions and exemptions: 17–20 March 1789	90
4 Baiting the primate: 19, 23, and 24 March 1789	92

5 Catharsis and controversy: the 'Perpetual Offering' and the peasants	96
6 Implementation	99
5. The secularization of the bishopric of Cracow	102
1 Patrimonium Reipublicae?	102
2 The king's predicament: between Lucchesini and Stackelberg	104
3 Trading the bishopric of Cracow	111
4 The dénouement: 17 July 1789	113
5 Equalizing the bishoprics: 20–24 July 1789	118
6 A political turning point	125
PART II COMPROMISE
6. Pamphleteers, journalists, and the Church: summer 1789–spring 1791	133
1 Pawlikowski, Kołłątaj, Staszic	133
2 The discourse of scandal: anti-clerical pamphlets	139
3 Defences of the clergy: Canons Skarszewski and Jezierski	142
4 In the columns of the press: France and the Habsburg Monarchy in turmoil	145
5 Providentialism and covenantalism in pastoral letters and sermons	147
7. On the brink of schism: August 1789–May 1790	151
1 'The temporality of the Church of Cracow'	152
2 The 'clerical deputation', the episcopate, and the nuncio: preparations	157
3 Recruitment, local government reform, and the Educational Commission	160
4 Religious dimensions of the urban and constitutional questions	162
5 The negotiation of a compromise: October 1789–May 1790	168
6 Deus ex machina	176
8. A limited ecclesiastical reform	179
1 'When war is a hair's breadth away from us . . .'	179
2 Episcopal salaries or estates? 25–26 May 1790	180
3 National sovereignty and noble equality: the Duchy of Siewierz, 27–29 May 1790	183
4 A measure of episcopal reform: 29 May–1 June 1790	187
5 Among 'lesser matters': the Ruthenian rite	190
6 High noon for abbots, and the limits of reform	194
7 Implementation	199
9. 'Une renaissance de barbarie'? The autumn of 1790	206
1 The Project for the Form of Government	207
2 The dominant faith and tolerated faiths	212
3 Controversies in advance of the sejmiiks	216
4 'So much fury against education' and the call to restore the Jesuits	218

5 Anti-clericalism and local ecclesiastical interests	229
6 Social, political, cultural, and fiscal questions	232
7 An inexperienced but enlightened new cohort?	234

PART III PROVIDENCE

10. The Law on Royal Towns and the Constitution of 3 May 1791	239
1 The preoccupations of the sejm: December 1790–March 1791	239
2 The Law on Royal Towns: citizenship, toleration, and religion	241
3 The Revolution of 3 May	248
4 The Revolutionary leadership	252
11. Propagating and sacralizing the Providential Revolution	256
1 A ‘miracle of the Divine hand, delivering us from ultimate calamity’	256
2 Referendum: the sejmiks of February 1792	259
3 Apotheosis: 3 May 1792	266
12. Antichrist comes from France	273
1 A whip, an aspergillum, a stove lid, and a file	273
2 ‘The French contagion’	277
3 The return of the primate	281
13. Caesar’s moral realm	284
1 Rome and the Code of Stanisław August	284
2 Plans for ‘uniform and public education’	289
3 The question of the ex-Jesuits at the sejm	290
4 The Police Commission and the Catholic Church	294
5 The battle for ecclesiastical censorship	296
14. Ecclesiastical reform—for the Orthodox	300
1 Raison d’état versus raison d’Église	300
2 ‘So that no clergyman would be useless in his condition’	303
3 Autocephality for the Orthodox	307
4 The final effort to reform the Catholic clergy	311
5 A Ukrainian coda	314
Conclusion	316
1 Epilogues	316
2 Explanations	320
3 Legacies	329
Select bibliography	332
Glossary	344
Index	349