

Contents

List of illustrations	xv
Acknowledgements	xxv

Introduction

1

Part 1: Key concepts

7

1 Approaching media texts	9
Semiotic approaches	11
Structuralism, difference(s) and oppositions	18
Denotation and connotation	21
The social nature of signs	23
Debates	25
Content analysis	26
Conclusion	30
References and further reading	31
Case study: Visual and aural signs	32
Analysing a poster, and notes on two photos	32
Voices and sound signifiers	36
Audio-visual moving images	38
Content analysis	39
References and further reading	41
2 Narratives	42
General theories of narrative	42
Narration, story and plot	51
Narratives in different media	57
Long-running 'open' narratives	60
Conclusion	63
References and further reading	64
Case study: CSI: Miami and crime fiction	66
The classification 'crime fiction'	66
Plot/story	68

	Applying Todorov	69
	Applying Propp	70
	Applying Barthes	70
	Applying Lévi-Strauss	70
	Narratives, institutions, ideologies	71
	References and further reading	73
3	Genres and other classifications	74
	Classifying films: Thelma and Louise (US 1991)	76
	Repetition and difference	77
	Case study: Formats and genres	80
	Repertoires of elements	83
	Status and genres 1: 'escapism', gender and verisimilitude	86
	Status and genres 2: the cultural context	88
	Formal classifications	93
	Conclusion	95
	References and further reading	96
	Case study: Horror as popular art	98
	The child in the horror film	98
	Global and local audiences	99
	Style and the Gothic: different repertoires	101
	Authorship and promotion	103
	Distribution strategies	104
	Conclusion	105
	References and further reading	105
4	Representations	106
	'Representation' now	106
	Stereotyping and 'scripts'	108
	Case study 1: US plantation stereotyping	110
	Scripts and performances	114
	Case study 2: Representations and gender	115
	Stages of change, and 'positive/negative' debates	119
	Comedy, fantasy and questions of representation	123
	Historical and institutional processes	125
	Conclusion	126
	References and further reading	127
	Case study: Images of migration	129
	Discourses and stereotypes of 'migration' and other kinds of travel	130
	News media	132

	The 'grain of truth' in stereotypes?	133
	Varieties of media representations	134
	Conclusion	137
	References and further reading	137
5	Globalisation	138
	Your experiences of globalisation	139
	Global histories	139
	Approaches to globalised media	144
	Global–local flows	149
	Global futures?	151
	Conclusion	160
	References and further reading	161
	Case study: Slumdog Millionaire: Global film?	163
	The background to a global hit	163
	The production of the film	165
	Distribution	166
	The Bollywood connection	167
	Controversies in reception	167
	After the Oscar ceremonies . . .	170
	Conclusion	171
	References and further reading	171
6	Ideologies and discourses	172
	'Ideology' and its histories: Marxist approaches	172
	Post-Marxism	180
	Identity politics and critical pluralism	182
	Discourses	185
	Lived cultures	189
	Conclusion	191
	References and further reading	192
	Case study: The Age of Stupid and climate change politics	194
	Context: images and discourses	194
	The term 'propaganda'	197
	Textual approaches to the film	198
	'Cinema' and its 'everyday practices'	202
	Conclusion	203
	References and further reading	203

7 Media as business	204
Studying business organisations	205
Ownership and control	206
The experience of conglomerates	208
New players in India and China	212
Public or private funding	215
Public and private in filmed entertainment	218
The new digital environment	219
Business models	223
Conclusion	226
References and further reading	227
Case study: Music and movies – digital and available	228
The challenge of copying	229
Piracy	231
Changing business models in the film industry	233
References and further reading	236

Part II: Debates

237

8 'New media' in a 'new world'?	239
'Newness' and histories	240
Academic approaches	242
Openness, collaboration and 'users'	247
'The long tail'	251
Digital copies and the 'enclosure' of information	254
New media, old metaphors	255
'New media', vanishing resources	256
Conclusion	258
References and further reading	259
9 The future of television?	261
Ownership and control in the television industry	263
Paying for television	265
Business models for television broadcasting	271
Case study: HBO	279
Case study: Channel 4	281
Conclusion	283
References and further reading	284

10 Regulation now	285
Politics and media economics	288
Regulation and 'freedom'	289
Historical background	291
Changes in the 'orthodoxy' of economic policies and new models	293
Deregulation, liberalisation and media institutions	296
The contemporary regulatory environment	298
A 'free market' for classification, censorship and sex and violence?	302
The public gets the media it deserves?	303
'Free choices' and 'free speech'?	304
Conclusion	307
References and further reading	308
11 Debating advertising, branding and celebrity	309
Advertising, marketing and branding	311
Debates	313
Histories	315
Hollywood and branding	320
Hollywood: the brand(s)	322
Case study: 'Brangelina'	324
Citizenship and consumption	328
A note on 'spin'	329
Conclusion	331
References and further reading	332
12 News and its futures	334
The importance of news, and views of 'the public'	335
The construction of 'news'	337
'Impartiality' and accuracy	337
'News values'	342
Debates on the influence of news	350
Futures: 'new' news?	352
Conclusion	355
References and further reading	356
13 Documentary and 'reality' debates	358
Recent issues in documentary	358
Documentary and assumptions about 'realism' and truth	359
Verisimilitude and 'performance'	362
'Performance' in documentaries	365
Ethics and documentary	367
Recent hybrids I: 'pranksters'	368

Recent hybrids 2: 'reality TV'	370
Recent hybrids 3: forms of 'drama documentary'	374
Conclusion	376
References and further reading	377
14 From 'audience' to 'users'	379
The effects model	382
The uses and gratifications model	388
From 'effects' to 'influence': factual forms	389
'Cultural' approaches	393
Re-mediating audiences	394
Discussion: hybrid forms and Mamma Mia!	399
Conclusion	401
References and further reading	402
Part III: Research methods and references
15 Research: skills and methods	407
Basics	408
Using the internet, and print forms	409
Fear of 'theory'	410
Methods	411
Qualitative and quantitative	414
Textual approaches	414
Samples	416
Focus groups	419
'Ethnographic' methods	420
Footnote: Wikipedia	424
References and further reading	427
Glossary of key terms	429
Index	445