

Contents

Acknowledgements	xi
List of Tables	xii
List of Abbreviations	xiii
Introduction	1
Section I Context: The Case for Convergence	7
Chapter 1 Europe's Partial and Selective Emulation of the US-led Revolution in Military Affairs	9
Patterns of convergence and divergence in defence reform: The objectives, instruments, institutional forums and temporality of defence policy	9
US defence policy in the post-Cold War era: 'Revolution', 'transformation' and 'second-order' change	10
The revolution in military affairs: Extending the 'uni-polar moment'	10
US military 'transformation' as second-order change	12
The three pillars of US 'transformation': Modularity, network centric warfare and effects based operations	16
The legacy of 'second-order' change: Forces designed for the 'wrong kind of war'?	18
Attaining 'balance'? The decline of EBO and the inception of third-order change	21
Reforms to the instruments and objectives of European great powers' defence policies: A partial and selective emulation of the RMA	28
UK defence reform: 'Third-order' change	28
French defence reform: 'Third-order' change	37
German defence reform: 'Second-order' change	47
Chapter 2 Convergence and Divergence in the Institutional Forums of Defence Policy: Functional Complementarity; Spatial and Temporal Differentiation	60
The dimensions of differentiation in European defence cooperation: Function, space and time	60

Travelling the road to convergence: Continued deficiencies in capabilities and doctrine	194
Chapter 6 The United Kingdom – From Strategic Innovation to Stasis	197
The strategic defence review: Brokerage to facilitate strategic innovation	198
Adding flesh to the bones of the SDR: The emergence of NEC, EBAO and the comprehensive approach	200
The resonance of past approaches with contemporary challenges	206
Growing contestation on the precise implications of a balanced force for capability acquisition	212
Managing military input into defence planning: Ensuring adaptability at the tactical and operational levels	214
Low executive autonomy and the temporal management of defence reform during the third term of the Labour government	217
The institutional forums of British defence policy: Reflecting systemic imperatives	223
British security culture: A readily deployable instrument	225
Chapter 7 Conclusions: The Empirical and Theoretical Implications	231
Neoclassical realism and defence reform: Matter over mind	231
Planning for the unexpected: The imperative of the balanced force in the post-Cold War era	234
Managing uncertainty and organisational politics: Organising military input to defence planning	236
The contradictory imperatives of structural realism and European defence cooperation	238
The invocation of culture, nationalism, ideology and exploitation of public vulnerability on behalf of internal and external balancing	240
The limitations of the book and the avenues for future research	243
Notes	244
Bibliography	287
Index	315