

Contents

|                                                                                 |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Acknowledgments                                                                 | vii |
| IntroductionAnne Fuchs, Kathleen James-Chakraborty, and Linda Shortt | 1   |

Part I. Historical and Sociological Reflections: 1989 and the Rehabilitation of German History

|                                                                                                                           |    |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----|
| 1: 1989 and the Chronological ImaginationPeter Fritzsche                                                       | 17 |
| 2: Unity on Trial: The Mauerschützenprozesse and theEast-West Rifts of Unified GermanyPertti Ahonen | 30 |
| 3: Apples, Identity, and Memory in Post-1989 GermanyJennifer A. Jordan                                         | 46 |

Part II. Architectural and Filmic Mediations: Germany in Transit and the Urban Condition

|                                                                                                                         |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 4: Topographical Turns: Recasting Berlin in ChristianPetzold's GespensterAndrew J. Webber         | 67  |
| 5: Interrupting Unity: The Berlin Wall's Second Life onScreen — a Transnational PerspectiveDeniz Göktürk | 82  |
| 6: Beyond the Wall: Reunifying BerlinKathleen James-Chakraborty                                              | 100 |
| 7: The Rebirth of Historic DresdenJürgen Paul                                                                | 117 |

Part III. Retrospective Reimaginings: The Death and Afterlife of East and West Germany in Contemporary Literature

|                                                                                                                                                             |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 8: Labyrinths, Mazes, and Mosaics: Fiction by Christa Wolf,Ingo Schulze, Antje Rávic Strubel, and Jens SparschuhElizabeth Boa                | 131 |
| 9: Reimagining the West: West Germany, Westalgia, and theGeneration of 1978Linda Shortt                                                      | 156 |
| 10: “Dem Sichtbaren war nicht ganz zu trauen”: PoeticReflections on German Unification in Angela Kraussand Monika MaronAnja K. Johannsen | 170 |
| 11: Cultural Topography and Emotional Legacies in DursGrünbein’s Dresden PoetryAnne Fuchs                                                    | 184 |
| 12: History from a Bird’s Eye View: Reimagining the Pastin Marcel Beyer’s KaltenburgAleida Assmann                                    | 205 |
| Works Cited                                                                                                                                                 | 221 |
| Notes on the Contributors                                                                                                                                   | 245 |
| Index                                                                                                                                                       | 249 |