

Contents

Preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xix
1 Introduction	1
An overview	1
Two economic systems	3
The mainstream view	4
Barter exchange economy and money economy	7
Principal characteristics of a moneyless economy	10
The problem of double coincidence of wants	16
Methods of inquiry	20
The structure and organization of the book	27
2 Money as a discovery or an invention	35
Introduction	35
Aristotle – whatever exists must have an origin	37
Money as an invention or a discovery	40
A few examples of scientific discoveries	42
Scientific inventions	43
Money is neither an invention nor a discovery	46
Conclusion	52
3 Division of labour and production of surplus products	55
Introduction	55
The ordinate and subordinate prerequisites	56
Division of labour as the point of departure	57
The exchange of surplus products is mutually advantageous	63
Conclusion	67

4	Initiation of money from the act of exchange	69
	Introduction	69
	Money is followed by exchange	70
	The historical epoch of money and commodity production	71
	Social division of labour and production of surplus products	73
	The process of transubstantiation	75
	The reification of real money	79
	The act of exchange – a non-Marxian perspective	83
	Conclusion	86
5	The exchange in kind versus the exchange against a medium	90
	Introduction	90
	Exchange of goods and exchange of gifts	91
	Beginning in isolation and ending with combination	94
	A unified act of buying and selling	97
	Conclusion	102
6	The origin of money and the most marketable good	104
	Introduction	104
	Most marketable goods	105
	No historical record can explain the origin of money	106
	The exchange of two unequal use values	108
	A use value exchange economy	111
	The degree of marketability of a good can be known only in exchange	112
	The placebo effect of the medium of exchange	114
	Conclusion	116
7	Money originated from its functions	118
	Introduction	118
	Money and its functions	119
	The unit of account theory of the origin of money	120
	The medium of exchange theory of the origin of money	127
	Derivation of money from its function as a standard for deferred payments	129
	The store of value function	132
	Conclusion	134
8	Money as a creation of debt payment or a creature of the state	137
	Introduction	137
	The state and the symbolic or token money	139

	Money is a Chartal means of payment	140
	Chartalism and the state money	142
	Money is neither a consciously designed nor cunningly invented instrument of commerce	147
	Debt payment and the tax levies and the origin of money	152
	Conclusion	155
9	Inherent difficulties of the barter system and the origin of money	159
	Introduction	159
	The ongoing theory of the origin of money	160
	The origin of money and the break away from the medieval world	162
	The common instrument of commerce	164
	The advent of a circulating medium	165
	Chaos in exchange due to lack of coincidence of wants	168
	A common measure of value remedies the inconveniences of the barter system	171
	The origin of money in economics textbooks	174
	Two goods economy and multiple goods economy	177
	Conclusion	179
10	The nature and the true origin of money	181
	Introduction	181
	The most misunderstood but the most received theory	182
	Division of labour and production of surplus products	186
	The act of exchange	188
	Commodity money as the only real money	192
	Direct and indirect exchange	196
	The exchange in kind and the exchange with a medium	198
	Money arises from the most marketable goods	199
	The origin via the functions of money	203
	State money	207
	Debt payment and the tax levies and the origin of money	212
	Difficulties of barter exchange and the origin of money	213
	Conclusion	216
11	Conclusion: the origins of money and how it came into being	218
	Introduction	218
	Can the origin of money be known?	219
	Primitive communism and the primordial barter economy	220

xii Contents

The primary requirements – natural constraints to formation of money 223

Social structures that lack money – social and economic constraints 225

Transition of a moneyless economy into a money-using economy 227

The indispensable determinants of the formation of money 235

The Marxian exchange value versus the exchange of economic goods 238

Some implications of the alternative theory of the origin of money 243

Conclusion 253

Bibliography

258

Index

264