

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Preface	xiii

PART I

Biographer and Biography

1 Melville and the Footsteps Theory of Biography	7
2 Textual Editor as Biographer in Training: The Norton Moby-Dick and the Northwestern-Newberry Writings of Herman Melville	19
3 Entangled by Pierre : Doing Biography Away from the Archives	45
4 Creating The New Melville Log and Writing the Biography	75
5 Facts That Do Not Speak for Themselves	121
6 Desiderata and New Discoveries in Traditional Archives and Databases	143

PART II

Critics vs. Biographical Scholarship

7 Agenda-Driven Reviewers: Melville in the Insular New York Newspapers and Magazines vs. Global Loomings from “Ragtag Bloggers” and Litblogs	167
8 Little Jack Horners and Archivophobics	195
9 Biographical Scholars and Recidivist Critics	225

10	Presentism in Melville Biography	251
11	The Late Twentieth-Century Mini-Melville: New York Intellectuals Without Information	265
12	The Early Twenty-First-Century Mini-Melville: New York Intellectuals Without Information	287

PART III

The Biographer in the Workshop: Demonstrations and Challenges

13	Melville as the “Modern Boccaccio”: The Fascinations of Fayaway	317
14	Melville’s Courtship of Elizabeth Shaw	331
15	Melville’s Short Run of Good Luck (1845–1850): Fool’s Paradise Without International Copyright	357
16	Melville Without International Copyright (1850–1854): A Harper “Sacrifice” for the “Public Good”	383
17	Melville and Hawthorne’s Dinner at the Hotel in Lenox	411
18	Why Melville Took Hawthorne to the Holy Land: Biography Enhanced by Databases and an Amateur Blogger	433
19	Melville as a Titan of Literature Among High-Minded British Admirers: The Kory-Kory and Queequeg Component	459
20	Damned by Dollars: Moby-Dick and the Price of Genius	481
	Notes	499
	Works Cited	545
	Index	563