

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
i. Voltaire, comedy and criticism	1
ii. Comedy and the comic	5
iii. Comedy and contradiction	9
iv. Playing with comedy	11
v. Comedy in context	15
1. From the Théâtre Français to the Théâtre de la Foire: L'Indiscret and La Fête de Bélesbat	19
i. Courtly comedy in the 1720s	19
ii. L'Indiscret	20
iii. La Fête de Bélesbat	37
iv. Signs of things to come	51
2. Voltaire and the comédie larmoyante : Le Comte de Boursoufle , L'Enfant prodigue and Les Originaux	52
i. Cirey and comedy	52
ii. A critical trio	57
iii. Le Comte de Boursoufle : comedy and comic subversion	59
iv. L'Enfant prodigue	63
v. Les Originaux	80
vi. Conclusion	86
3. Rewriting Molière: L'Envieux and La Prude	88
i. From Molière to Voltaire	88
ii. L'Envieux	89
iii. La Prude	100
iv. Conclusion	117
4. Comedy for the king: La Princesse de Navarre	119
i. A royal commission	119
ii. Text and contexts	121
iii. Text and theatricality	129
iv. The play of tones	130
v. The play of words and music	137
vi. Comedy and propaganda	143
vii. Posterity	146

Contents

5. Comic heroines: La Femme qui a raison and Nanine	148
i. Critical comedies	148
ii. La Femme qui a raison	150
iii. Nanine	162
iv. Posterity	181
6. Voltaire, the drame and l'infâme : Socrate , L'Ecossaise , Le Droit du seigneur and Saül	184
i. Voltaire in the 1750s and early 1760s	184
ii. Socrate	187
iii. L'Ecossaise	203
iv. Le Droit du seigneur	216
v. Saül	227
vi. Responding to Diderot	245
7. Voltaire, national history and the opéra-comique : Charlot , Les Deux Tonneaux and Le Baron d'Otrante	247
i. Comedy and conflict	247
ii. Charlot	248
iii. Voltaire and the opéra-comique	261
iv. Les Deux Tonneaux	267
v. Le Baron d'Otrante	280
vi. Conclusion	289
8. Returning to Molière: Le Dépositaire	292
i. An anecdotal comedy	292
ii. Molière in the 1760s	293
iii. Comedy and reaction	297
iv. Echoes of Tartuffe	301
v. Echoes of Le Misanthrope	308
vi. Rounding on Rousseau: moderation and mondanité	314
vii. Conclusion	316
Conclusion	319
i. Comedy and apotheosis	319
ii. Tradition and innovation	322
Bibliography	327
Index	349