

Contents

I. “Everything Cracks”: Modernism, Art, and Identity	1
1. “[A]n attitude of complete scepticism about even the most widely accepted judgements”: Modernism as an Aesthetic and as an Epoch	4
2. A Historical Sketch of Modernism	8
3. “[I]l ne peut se créer d’art stable, d’art définitif”: Modernism and Art	12
4. “[T]he influence of something upon somebody---”: The Scope of the Present Study	18
II. “As Unalterable as the Way of the Eternal” [?]: Towards a Definition of Personal Identity	22
1. A Definition of Personal Identity	24
2. A (Very) Short History of Personal Identity	27
3. “[A] Complex Multiform Creature”: The Menschenbild in (Pre-)Modernist Literature and Art	31
III. ‘Ut Pictura Poesis’ [?!]: On the Problem of Comparing Painting and Literature	42
1. “Ut Pictura Poesis”: Of “Sister-Arts” and Artistic Hierarchies	44
2. Introducing Difference: James Harris, “A Discourse on Music, Painting, and Poetry” (1744)	48
3. Joseph Spence, Polymetis (1747)	52
4. The Twentieth Century	54
4.1. “Nicht alles ist zu allen Zeiten möglich”: Heinrich Wölfflin’s Kunstgeschichtliche Grundbegriffe (1915)	56
5. Summary: Aesthetic Positions	57
6. Dissenting Voices	59
7. Recent Developments	61
8. A Cultural-Historical Approach to Intermediality	67
9. Poetics of the Opened Form	72
IV. “Le Père De Nous Tous”: Paul Cézanne	75
1. Pictures from the House of the Dead: Cézanne’s Early Works	79
2. “Réaliser Sur Nature”: Cézanne’s ‘Impressionist Turn’	84

3.	The Essence of the Object: Cézanne's Still lifes	90
3.1.	Nature Morte Au Comptoir (1879/1880)	91
3.2.	Madame Cézanne à la Jupe Rayée (c. 1877)	100
4.	Non Finito	102
4.1.	Portrait of Ambroise Vollard (1899)	104
4.2.	The Late Portraits	108
5.	Opening the Closed Form	110
6.	The Bathers	111
V.	“Die Durchbrechung der geschlossenen Form”: Typology and the Dissolution of Identity in Pablo Picasso’s (Pre-)Cubist Portraits	115
1.	The Portrait of Gertrude Stein (1906)	118
2.	Portraits of Fernande Olivier (1906-1909)	124
3.	“[T]hree of Picasso’s greatest portraits”: Wilhelm Uhde, Ambroise Vollard, Daniel Henry Kahnweiler	128
3.1.	Portrait de Wilhelm Uhde (1910)	129
3.2.	“Die Durchbrechung der geschlossenen Form”: Early Interpretations of Cubism	130
3.3.	Portrait de Ambroise Vollard (1910)	135
3.4.	Portrait de Daniel-Henry Kahnweiler (1910)	138
4.	“Everybody’s Portrait” and the Dissolution of the Human Form: Le Poète (1911) and Ma Jolie (1911)	139
VI.	“The History of all Human Beings”: Gertrude Stein and the Failure of Typology	144
1.	“J’étais à cette Époque Seule à Comprendre Picasso”: Stein and Art—the Art of Stein	145
2.	“Normal Motor Automatism” (1896)	159
3.	Q.E.D. (1903)	162
4.	“Melanctha” (1906)	168
5.	The Making of Americans (1911)	180
5.1.	“[M]any millions of each kind”: The Creation of a ‘Psychological Pantheon’	183
5.2.	“I am writing everything as I am learning anything”: The Enactment of Perception	194
5.3.	Composite Portraiture and the Detection of Types	199
5.4.	“Every one to me just now is in pieces to me”: The Failure of Typology	203

VII. “A Wedge-Shaped Core of Darkness”: Virginia Woolf and the Post-Impressionist ‘Self’	211
1. The “Art Quake of 1910”	212
2. ‘Rendering an Object’s Real Significance’: Post-Impressionist Aesthetics	215
3. “One should be a painter”: Virginia Woolf and the Relationship between Painting and Literature	221
4. “[T]he solid grain of pure self”: “[Phyllis and Rosamond]” (1906)	230
5. “[T]hat shell of a person which is seen by other people”: “The Mark on the Wall” (1917)	232
6. “It is no use trying to sum people up”: Jacob’s Room (1922)	235
7. “[S]he would not say of herself, I am this, I am that”: Mrs. Dalloway (1925)	244
8. “[T]he truth of things”: To the Lighthouse (1927)	263
VIII. “Identity is a very strange thing”: Conclusion	283
IX. Bibliography	286
1. Primary Works	286
2. Secondary Works	288
2.1. Modernism	288
2.2. Personal Identity	290
2.3. Intermediality	291
2.4. Painting: Paul Cézanne, Pablo Picasso et al.	294
2.5. Writing: Gertrude Stein, Virginia Woolf et al.	299
X. Plates	303