

Contents

Preface	v
1. Introduction	1
1.1. Data	7
1.1.1. Lexical status of items	8
1.2. Key references	9
1.3. Organisation of the work	12
2. The theoretical framework	19
2.1. Extra-grammatical formations in Generative Morphology	20
2.2. Extra-grammatical formations in Naturalness Theory	22
2.2.1. Natural Morphology	22
2.2.2. Natural Phonology	26
2.3. Extra-grammatical morphology	28
2.3.1. Extra-grammatical vs. expressive morphology	30
2.3.2. Extra-grammatical vs. marginal morphology	32
2.3.3. Extra-grammatical vs. grammatical morphology	36
2.3.4. Grammaticality and regularity of extra-grammatical morphology	39
2.3.5. Extra-grammaticality and language change	43
2.3.6. Fundamental notions	48
2.3.7. Definition and properties of extra-grammatical morphology	55
3. Abbreviations	64
3.1. Definition, delimitation, and classification	67
3.1.1. Definition of clipping	68
3.1.2. Delimitation: Clipping vs. other processes	70
3.1.3. Classification and structure of clippings	72
3.1.4. Definition of acronyms and initialisms	82
3.1.5. Delimitation: Acronyms and initialisms vs. other processes	85
3.1.6. Classification of acronyms and initialisms	87
3.1.7. Acronyms and initialisms: Further remarks	93
3.2. Abbreviations as extra-grammatical phenomena	95

3.2.1. Irregularities in abbreviations	97
3.2.2. Regularities in abbreviations	101
3.2.3. Predictability in abbreviations	105
3.2.4. Criteria of well-formedness	109
4. Blends	111
4.1. Definition, delimitation, and classification	112
4.1.1. Definition and main features	112
4.1.2. Delimitation: Blending vs. other processes.	115
4.1.3. Classification and structure of blends	118
4.1.4. Blends: Further remarks	125
4.2. Blending as an extra-grammatical phenomenon	127
4.2.1. Irregularities in blends.	128
4.2.2. Regularities in blends	131
4.2.3. Predictability in blends	135
4.2.4. Criteria of well-formedness	138
5. Reduplicatives	141
5.1. Definition, delimitation, and classification	144
5.1.1. Definition	144
5.1.2. Delimitation: Reduplication vs. other processes	146
5.1.3. Classification and structure of reduplicatives	148
5.2. Reduplication as an extra-grammatical phenomenon	159
5.2.1. Irregularities in reduplicatives	160
5.2.2. Regularities in reduplicatives	162
5.2.3. Predictability in reduplicatives	165
5.2.4. Criteria of well-formedness	167
6. Minor phenomena	169
6.1. Back-formation: Definition, delimitation, and classification	170
6.1.1. Definition	172
6.1.2. Delimitation: Back-formation vs. other processes	173
6.1.3. Classification and structure of back-formed words	174
6.2. Back-formation as an extra-grammatical phenomenon	179
6.2.1. Irregularities in back-formation	180
6.2.2. Regularities in back-formation	182
6.2.3. Predictability in back-formation	183
6.2.4. Criteria of well-formedness	184
6.3. Infixation: Definition, delimitation, and classification	185
6.3.1. Definition	186

6.3.2. Delimitation: Infixation vs. other processes	187
6.3.3. Classification of infixes	188
6.4. Infixation as an extra-grammatical phenomenon	192
6.4.1. Irregularities in infixation	192
6.4.2. Regularities in infixation	194
6.4.3. Predictability in infixation	196
6.4.4. Criteria of well-formedness	197
6.5. Phonaesthemes: Definition, delimitation, and classification	198
6.5.1. Definition	200
6.5.2. Delimitation: Phonaesthemes vs. other morpho(no)logical concepts	202
6.5.3. Classification of phonaesthemes	202
6.6. Phonaesthemes as an extra-grammatical phenomenon	206
6.6.1. Irregularities in phonaesthemes	207
6.6.2. Criteria for identification	208
7. Extra-grammatical formations in use	210
7.1. Principles of contextual suitability	212
7.2. Typical contexts and domains	215
7.3. Contextualising extra-grammatical phenomena	216
7.3.1. Clippings	217
7.3.2. Acronyms and initialisms	225
7.3.3. Blends	232
7.3.4. Reduplicatives	238
7.3.5. Back-formation, infixation, and phonaesthemes	244
8. Conclusions	250
Notes	258
References	270
Sources for data	285
Lexical index	287
Subject index	330