

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Preface—Life on the Tip of a Pen	xi
The Legacy of Exile: A Biography of Pain	xv
The Interwar Quandary: Europe and the Jews	xxii
Beyond the Pleasure Principle: Telling a Life	xxviii
Chapter 1—Mental Captivity. Re-imagining a Lost Heritage	1
The Jewish Intellectual in Interwar Central Europe	2
The Apolitical Weimar Intellectual and the Central European Tradition	2
The Concept of the Jewish Intellectual	5
Cultivating Marginality	11
The Material Culture of Exile	14
The Capitulation of the European Mind	19
“All Roads Lead to Brody”	24
Strawberries (1929, 1936)	28
Conclusion	35
Chapter 2—Opening Up the Crypt. The Political Potential of Nostalgia	39
Nostalgia	41
Europe’s “Jewish Orphans”	45
Deconstructing Vienna	48
Diasporic Identities	52
The Emperor’s Tomb (1938)	54
Conclusion	63
Chapter 3—The Lamentations of an “Old Jew.” The Artist As Exemplary Sufferer	67
Exemplary Sufferers	68
The Creation of Mendel Singer— Job (1930)	71
A Questionable Fate: Hereditary Madness	76
Narratives of Guilt	82
Self-Narration, Part 1: The Suffering Jew	88

Roads to Salvation—The Question of Justice	95
Conclusion	98
Chapter 4—The Double Bind of Self-Narration.
Jewish Identity and the Undercurrents of German-Jewish
Modernity	101
Theories of Non-Belonging	103
Self-Inflicted Homelessness	105
Self-Narration, Part 2: The Austrian Officer	108
Self-Narration, Part 3: The Hotel Patriot	111
Literary Cacophony, Linguistic Belonging	117
The Legend of the Holy Drinker (1940)	125
Conclusion	130
Chapter 5—Prophecies of Unrest. Interwar Europe under an
Apocalyptic Lens	133
On European Shores	135
Prophetic Encounters	141
The Antichrist (1934)	145
A Universalist in Paris	152
Quandaries of a Solitary Mind	158
Conclusion	163
Postscript	167
Bibliography	171
Index	187