

Contents

Preface	page ix
List of abbreviations	xi
1. Introduction	1
1.1. Preliminary	1
1.2. Scope and objectives of the research	4
1.3. Outline	10
2. The Dutch Revolt: historical contexts	13
2.1. The Netherlands around 1555	13
2.2. The formation of the Burgundian state	16
2.3. The political structure and culture of the Netherlands around 1555	19
2.4. The Dutch Revolt: overtures, 1555-1568	30
2.5. Renaissance, 1568-1576	40
2.6. Independence and segregation, 1576-1590	45
2.7. The Netherlands in 1590	59
3. Religion and resistance: the case of Reformed Protestantism	62
3.1. Introduction	62
3.2. Obedience and resistance: preludes	68
3.3. Years of radicalization, 1560-1566	74
3.4. The Annus mirabilis , 1566	82
3.5. Return to exile	95
3.6. Conclusions	105
4. Politics and resistance: the political justification of the Dutch Revolt	110
4.1. Introduction	110
4.2. The early protests of the 1560s	110
4.3. The apologies of the Annus mirabilis : Jacob van Wesembeke and the defence of liberty	115

4.4. From justification to revolt, 1568–1572	120
4.5. The revolt of Holland and Zeeland, 1572–1576	126
4.6. From revolt to abjuration, 1576–1581	133
4.7. The defence of the abjuration	146
4.8. Conclusions	160
5. From revolt to republic: the quest for the best state of the commonwealth (1578–1590)	166
5.1. Introduction	166
5.2. Pleas for princely rule: the problem of François, Duke of Anjou	167
5.3. Justus Lipsius and the rise of political Neostoicism	180
5.4. Following the Swiss and the plea for democracy	187
5.5. The call for civic virtue	191
5.6. The final countdown: Holland, the Earl of Leicester and the debate on sovereignty	199
5.7. Conclusions	207
6. Politics and religion (1572–1590): the debates on religious toleration and the substance of liberty	213
6.1. Introduction: Reformed Protestantism between 1572 and 1590	213
6.2. The debate on religious peace	217
6.3. The relationship between church and political authorities	229
6.4. The debates of Dirck Volckertsz Coornhert	243
6.5. Conclusions	256
7. Conclusions: the Dutch Revolt and the history of European political thought	260
7.1. The political thought of the Dutch Revolt	260
7.2. The Reformation and the political thought of the Dutch Revolt	266
7.3. Monarchomach ideology and the political thought of the Dutch Revolt	269
7.4. Renaissance republicanism and the Dutch Revolt	276
Appendix: a note on primary sources	288
Bibliography	291
Primary sources	291
Catalogues of pamphlets	306
Secondary sources	307
Index	323