

Contents

Acknowledgements — VII

- I      Preliminaries I: Introduction and Rationale — 1

- II     Preliminaries II: Martin Crimp's Theatre, a Pedagogy of Resistance — 13
  - 1      Martin Crimp's Context — 15
    - 1.1     Late Capitalism and Societies of Control — 15
    - 1.2     A Post-Holocaust Writer: Capitalism and Barbarism — 21
  - 2      The Semiotic Potential of Collapse on Stage — 28
    - 2.1     Collapse on Stage: What it is and how it Works — 28
    - 2.2     I Have Witnessed: Testimony and Audience Responsibility — 30
      - 2.2.1    Auschwitz and Testimony — 30
      - 2.2.2    Audience, Resistance and Testimony — 35
  - 3      Redefining Ethics: A Collapsing Body — 41

- III    Beginnings of a Dramaturgy: Violence, Memory and Retribution in The Treatment (1993) — 49
  - 1      Introduction: Collapse, 'In-Yer-Face' Theatre and the 'Society of Spectacle' — 51
  - 2      The 'Spectacle' Filled our Pockets: Duplicity, Sexism and the Market — 58
    - 2.1     La Dérive: Marginal Spaces of Resistance — 61
    - 2.2     'Like A Disapproving Person': Collapse, Pretence and Alienation — 68
  - 3      The Point of Rupture: Collapse and Barbarism — 77
    - 3.1     Stopping the Technology: Détournement, 'Luddism' and 'Terrorism' — 81
    - 3.2     Clifford's Eyes and the 'Banality of Evil' — 86
    - 3.3     A Rewriting and a Parable of Ambition — 92
    - 3.4     Audience and Violence: From Voyeurs to Active Witnesses — 98
  - 4      Conclusion: Towards Subjectivity and Ethics — 100

- IV Postdramatic Plays: Attempts on her Life (1997) and Face to the Wall (2002) — 103
- 1 Interpretation, Self-Regulation and Postdramatism — 110
- 1.1 Crimp and Postdramatism — 110
- 2 Short Circuits of Desire: Language and Power in Attempts on her Life — 116
- 2.1 The ‘Camera’, Narcissism, and the ‘Society of Spectacle’ — 116
- 2.2 ‘I Can’t’: A Body in Denial — 124
- 2.3 Ready-mades, Language and Power — 135
- 3 ‘The Stage, a Skull’: Male Collapse as Resistance in Face to the Wall — 141
- 3.1 Fewer Emergencies (2005) and the Non-Hierarchical Theatrical Experience — 143
- 3.2 ‘The Warm Metal – Thank You – of the Gun’: Interpretation and Violation — 151
- 3.3 ‘Voyeurs in Bedlam?’: Re-Materializing the Audience — 158
- V Dramatic Plays: Female Breakdown as Micropolitical Resistance — 167
- 1 Stopping Time: Memory and Resistance in The Country (2000) — 169
- 1.1 Introduction — 169
- 1.1.1 Of Violence and Pathos — 169
- 1.1.2 ‘Paper, Scissors, Stone’: A Narrative of Testimony and a Power Game — 176
- 1.2 Collapse as Self-Awareness: Corinne’s Change — 181
- 1.2.1 Collapse, Mercantilism and ‘Empire’ — 182
- 1.2.2 Virgil, Collapse and Testimony — 185
- 1.3 ‘It is Only the Flesh’: Rebecca’s Moral Imagination — 188
- 1.3.1 Collapse as Violence — 188
- 1.3.2 Madness as Reason’s Other — 193
- 1.4 Patchwork of Voices, Swarm of Resistance — 197
- 1.4.1 Outbursts of Solidarity — 199
- 1.4.2 Community of Resistance — 202
- 1.5 ‘Oh, to Reverse’: Spiralling Towards Full Time — 208
- 1.5.1 Collapsing Boundaries — 209
- 1.5.2 Stopping Time: An Ethics of Resentment — 212
- 1.5.3 Testimony and Late Capitalism — 216

1.5.4	Path of Discovery: the Ethics of Spectatorship —	220
1.5.5	To Survive: Self-Creation and the Paring Down of Selfhood —	225
1.6	Conclusion: Turning Towards Psychology —	228
2	Oppression, Resistance and Terrorism in Cruel and Tender (2004) —	231
2.1	Sophocles, Crimp and Bondy —	231
2.2	Radical Ethics: The Body as Weapon, Insight and Image —	239
2.2.1	The Cartesian Self: Verticality and the Word —	240
2.2.2	Amelia's 'Embodied' Tongue —	243
2.3	Of Shamans and Cyborgs: From Bodies of Mastery to Bodies of Need —	247
2.3.1	Invocation and Ritual —	249
2.3.2	A Utopia of Mutual Dependency —	252
2.4	Collapse and Testimony: Late Capitalism and Totalitarianism —	261
2.4.1	Inequality, Auschwitz and the Collapsing Self —	264
2.4.2	Opening a Space of Exteriority —	271
2.4.3	The Inheritance of Resistance —	276
2.5	Conclusion: Memory as Imperative and Yearning —	279
VI	Testimony and World Inequality in Crimp's Adaptation of Anton Chekhov's The Seagull (2006) —	283
1.1	Introduction: Mirroring Fragments, Play-Within-a-Play —	285
1.2	Testimony as Resistance: Crimp's and Mitchell's Play-Within-a-Play —	289
1.3	'Cold, Blank, Distant': Breakdown as Resistance —	298
VII	General Conclusions: Martin Crimp's Theatre: a Dramaturgy of Resistance —	313
VIII	Works Cited —	327
	Primary Sources —	329
	Secondary Sources —	330