

CONTENTS

PREFACE .....	xi
SIGLA .....	xii
INTRODUCTION
The problem to be studied. Definition of key terms.
The beginnings of historical thinking: Egypt, Mesopotamia, the Hittites, ancient Israel .....		1
CHAPTER ONE
The Graeco-Roman Period
I. Greece: Hesiod, Herodotus, Thucydides and invented speeches, Euhemerus and Palaephatus, the Amazons .....	21
II. Rome: Livy, Romulus and some emperors proclaimed to be gods, Cicero and the historian's craft, Sextus Empiricus .....	46
CHAPTER TWO
Fabula and Historia . The Consciousness of the Past in the Middle Ages
I. Jacobus a Voragine's Legenda aurea : gospel figures .....	62
II. The Legenda aurea : emperors .....	73
III. Legends of the popes .....	85
IV. The Popess Joan .....	97
V. Pope Silvester II .....	108
CHAPTER THREE
Gog, Magog and the Latter-Day Emperor
I. Judaeo-Christian eschatology; Fredegar .....	118
II. The Mongols and Prester John .....	127
III. The Barbarossa myth .....	137

CONTENTS

CHAPTER FOUR

The Renaissance Period (1300-1600)

- I. Terminological refinements; a new sense of complexity . . . . . 146
- II. Towards an identification of myth: Dante, Boccaccio and Erasmus . . . . . 150
- III. Legendary saints and the heroes of Antiquity . . . . . 157
- IV. Joan of Arc . . . . . 162
- V. William Tell. . . . . 169
- VI. Arminius. . . . . 179

CHAPTER FIVE

Ad fontes. Renaissance Genealogy and the Myth of the Golden Age

- I. The descent from Troy. . . . . 189
- II. Nascent critique of fabulous genealogies . . . . . 195
- III. The monumental tomb of Maximilian I and other portrait galleries . . . . . 199
- IV. The Golden Age; historia and fabula in balance. . . . . 207

CHAPTER SIX

Old Testament Scholarship in the Early Modern Age

- I. Outline of the age . . . . . 220
- II. The 'neutral' study of the Old Testament; Joseph Scaliger and Richard Simon. . . . . 222
- III. The progress of fabula; Bochart, Kircher and La Peyrère . . . . . 232
- IV. The birth of the concept of sovereign myth; Spinoza, Vico, Herder and Eichhorn . . . . . 247
- V. Blurring the division line; Bossuet, Reimarus, Semler and accommodation . . . . . 258

CHAPTER SEVEN

The Early Modern Age and the Origins of Rome

- I. Prehistory defies the chronologers . . . . . 270
- II. Prehistory defies the antiquarians . . . . . 275
- III. The discovery of the mythical age; Fontenelle and Heyne . . . . . 282
- IV. The origins of Rome; the sceptics: Du Temps and Cluverius. . . . . 288
- V. The origins of Rome; defenders of the tradition: Vossius, Perizonius. . . . . 298
- VI. The theory of myth applied to Rome; Heyne . . . . . 305

CONTENTS

CHAPTER EIGHT

Historia and Fabula in the New Testament

- I. Limiting the sway of divine inspiration: Origen,
Richard Simon and J.D. Michaelis . . . . . 311
- II. The English Deists . . . . . 316
- III. New Testament myths and the historical Jesus;
David Friedrich Strauss. . . . . 325

CHAPTER NINE

The Nineteenth Century

- I. The Romantics and mythology. . . . . 336
- II. Hypercriticism: historia denounced as fabula.
Old myths in the service of nationalism. . . . . 339
- III. Bachofen: from the mythical prehistory of Rome to matriarchy . . . . . 350
- IV. The last scholarly defenders of the historicity of Genesis . . . . . 369
- V. Historical subjects in nineteenth-century art: David,
Gros, Werner . . . . . 375

CONCLUSION . . . . . 396

APPENDIX I

Renaissance humanism and the problem of grace

without baptism . . . . . 407

APPENDIX II

The debate on the origins of Rome in the Académie

des Inscriptions. . . . . 416

INDEX OF PERSONS . . . . . 423

ILLUSTRATIONS . . . . . 435