

Table of contents

1	Introduction	1
2	The need for a new approach to MBA-education	5
2.1	Business schools and the MBA	5
2.2	The current context of management education	10
2.3	Criticism of business schools and the MBA	12
2.3.1	Lacking relevance of research for practice.....	13
2.3.2	Lack of integration across functional areas	14
2.3.3	Overemphasis on analytic techniques	15
2.3.4	Lack of vision	16
2.3.5	Lack of soft skills and people management	16
2.3.6	Lack of preparation for business ethics in real life	17
2.3.7	Inefficient pedagogy in management education.....	18
2.4	Summary.....	19
3	Learning and instruction.....	21
3.1	Conceptualizations of learning.....	21
3.1.1	The behaviorist conceptualization of learning	21
3.1.2	The cognitivist conceptualization of learning	22
3.1.3	The constructivist conceptualization of learning.....	23
3.2	Approaches to instruction.....	26
3.2.1	The behaviorist approach to instruction	28
3.2.2	The cognitivist approach to instruction	29
3.2.3	The constructivist approach to instruction	30
3.3	Digital media in support of instruction.....	34
3.3.1	Criteria to classify communication tools	36
3.3.2	CSCL-tools – a broad overview	37
3.3.3	Computer-mediated communication	40
3.4	Summary.....	44
4	Problem-based learning.....	47
4.1	Development and definition of problem-based learning.....	47
4.2	Problem-based learning in business education.....	52
4.3	Problem-based learning curricula.....	54
4.4	Objectives of problem-based learning.....	58
4.5	Effects of problem-based vs. conventional curricula.....	59
4.5.1	Learning outcomes	60
4.5.1.1	Declarative knowledge	60

4.5.1.2	Acquisition of problem solving skills.....	62
4.5.2	Learning process.....	64
4.5.2.1	Study behavior.....	64
4.5.2.2	Students' experience of problem-based learning	66
4.5.3	The difficulty of comparing problem-based learning with "traditional" instruction.....	69
4.6	Components of problem-based learning.....	71
4.6.1	The problem.....	71
4.6.1.1	The content of the problem.....	72
4.6.1.2	The context of the problem.....	74
4.6.1.3	The alignment of problems in a sequence	76
4.6.1.4	Guidance	77
4.6.2	The tutor.....	78
4.6.2.1	Tutor characteristics.....	79
4.6.2.2	Tutor role and activity	84
4.6.3	The process	90
4.6.3.1	The opening session and the identification of learning issues.....	91
4.6.3.2	Self-directed learning.....	95
4.6.3.3	The reporting session.....	98
4.7	Distributed problem-based learning	101
4.8	Implementation in the organizational context.....	105
4.9	Summary.....	106
5	Action Learning.....	109
5.1	Development and definitions of action learning	109
5.1.1	"Learning = Programmed Knowledge +Questioning Insight".....	111
5.1.2	Varieties of action learning.....	113
5.1.3	Research on action learning.....	120
5.2	Objectives of action learning.....	123
5.3	Action learning in management education.....	123
5.4	Components of an Action Learning Program.....	126
5.4.1	The participants	127
5.4.1.1	The client and sponsor.....	127
5.4.1.2	The set and its members	128
5.4.1.3	The coach/set adviser/facilitator.....	131
5.4.2	The problem.....	135

5.4.3	The Process.....	140
5.4.3.1	The generic action learning process	140
5.4.3.2	Reflection.....	142
5.4.3.2.1	Concepts of reflection	143
5.4.3.2.2	Processes and tools for reflection.....	144
5.5	Virtual action learning	150
5.6	Implementation in the organisational context	154
5.7	Summary.....	154
6	Project-based learning	157
6.1	Development and definitions of project-based learning	157
6.2	Project-based curricula	161
6.3	Objectives of project-based learning.....	163
6.4	Components of project-based learning.....	167
6.4.1	The project charge	168
6.4.2	The role of the teacher	170
6.4.3	The process: phases and activities.....	170
6.4.3.1	Project phases – the conceptual view	171
6.4.3.2	Activities in project-based courses – empirical findings.....	176
6.5	Virtual project-based learning	181
6.6	Implementation in the organizational context.....	185
6.7	Summary.....	186
7	Assessment	189
7.1	Assessment in problem-based learning	190
7.1.1	The progress test	191
7.1.2	The OverAll Test and the Knowledge-Test.....	192
7.1.3	The modified essay question	193
7.1.4	The triple jump	193
7.1.5	Self- and peer assessment	194
7.2	Assessment in project-based learning	195
7.2.1	Assessing product and process	195
7.2.2	Student involvement in defining the assessment system	196
7.2.3	Assessment of individual and group performance	197
7.2.4	Accounting for highly individual learning results.....	198
7.2.5	Formative assessment.....	199
7.3	Peer assessment	200
7.4	Summary.....	205

8	Case Study: The project-based MBA.....	207
8.1	Research design.....	207
8.1.1	Research objective and questions.....	207
8.1.2	Research approach.....	208
8.1.3	Semi-structured interview.....	208
8.1.4	Sampling.....	209
8.1.5	Data processing and analysis.....	210
8.2	Overview of the program.....	211
8.3	The students.....	213
8.4	The faculty team.....	214
8.5	The learning outcomes framework.....	215
8.6	The work environments.....	219
8.6.1	The electronic learning community.....	219
8.6.2	The digital portfolio.....	220
8.7	The projects.....	222
8.7.1	Projects overview.....	222
8.7.2	Preparing a project.....	226
8.7.2.1	Client acquisition and project design.....	226
8.7.2.2	Matching student teams.....	227
8.7.3	The introductory project.....	227
8.7.4	Team-based projects.....	229
8.7.4.1	Starting a project.....	230
8.7.4.1.1	Introduction of the team members and development of ground rules.....	230
8.7.4.1.2	Presentation of the project charge.....	231
8.7.4.1.3	Development of the list of learning issues and learning outcomes.....	231
8.7.4.1.4	Development of the action plan.....	232
8.7.4.1.5	Distribution of tasks.....	233
8.7.4.2	Remote collaboration.....	236
8.7.4.2.1	Working in virtual teams.....	236
8.7.4.2.2	Interaction with the client.....	240
8.7.4.2.3	Interaction between teams.....	242
8.7.4.3	Presentation of the projects and feedback.....	244
8.7.4.4	Peer and self-assessment.....	245
8.7.4.5	Cohort debrief.....	248

8.7.5	Individual projects	248
8.8	Individual learning modules	250
8.9	Research activities and self-study	252
8.10	Learning with learning outcomes and the digital portfolio	255
8.10.1	The use of the learning outcomes	255
8.10.2	Working with the digital portfolio	256
8.11	Assessment and grading	258
8.12	Social events	261
8.13	The role of the electronic learning community	262
8.14	The role of the participants	264
8.14.1	The role of students	264
8.14.2	The role of the faculty	269
8.14.3	The role of the client	274
8.15	The cohort as a community	277
8.16	Summary: Learning on MBA Fellows	280
9	A design framework for the project-based MBA	289
9.1	Instructional conditions for MBA programs	289
9.2	Basic program parameters	290
9.2.1	Defining the target group	290
9.2.2	Program format, workload and duration	291
9.2.3	Degree of modularity	291
9.2.4	Number of students	292
9.2.5	Degree of virtualization	293
9.3	Components of the program	294
9.3.1	Learning outcomes framework	294
9.3.2	Projects	296
9.3.2.1	Amount, duration, workload and parallelism of projects	296
9.3.2.2	Problem design	297
9.3.2.2.1	Problem content	298
9.3.2.2.2	Problem context	299
9.3.2.3	Social format	303
9.3.2.4	Similarity	305
9.3.2.4.1	Similarity of project charges	305
9.3.2.4.2	Similarity of contexts	307
9.3.2.5	Process design	308
9.3.2.6	Project charge development	312

9.3.2.7	Alignment of projects	315
9.3.3	Individual learning modules	316
9.3.4	Just-in-time instruction	317
9.3.5	Reflection.....	318
9.3.6	Feedback	322
9.3.7	Monitoring the learning process	325
9.3.8	Design factor: Coerciveness of tasks.....	326
9.3.9	Assessment	326
9.3.10	Community development	328
9.3.11	Culture development.....	329
9.4	The virtual learning environment	330
9.5	Participants	331
9.5.1	Student acquisition and admission	331
9.5.2	Faculty selection and faculty team	332
9.5.3	Client acquisition	333
9.5.3.1	Client companies	333
9.5.3.2	Trust	334
9.5.3.3	Client and sponsor	335
9.5.3.4	Cooperation agreement.....	336
9.6	Summary.....	337
10	Summary and conclusion	339
11	References	345
Appendix.....		CD-ROM