

---

Contents

Ralf Haekel & Sabine Blackmore
Discovering the Human – An Introduction . . . . . 7

I. Eighteenth-Century Science and the Arts

Christoph Heyl
William Hogarth, Science and Human Nature . . . . . 29

Mascha Hansen
Scientifick Wives – Eighteenth-Century Women Between Self, Society and Science . . . . . 53

Sladja Blazan
Immanuel Kant’s “One Great Republic” – From Spirit Theory to Moral Philosophy . . . . . 69

II. Romantic Science and the Arts

Catherine Clinger
Speleological Interiority – The Mindfulness of a Spelunking Anatomist . . 85

Ulrike Kristina Köhler
Ann Radcliffe’s Gothic – A Subtle Plea for Female Education in the Arts and in the Sciences . . . . . 105

Felix C.H. Sprang
The Rise of the “Life Sciences” and the Dismissal of Plant Life in the Late Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries . . . . . 115

III. The Human and Media Change

Hania Siebenpfeiffer

(Imagining) First Contact – Literary Encounters of the Extraterrestrial

Other in Seventeenth- and Eighteenth-Century Novels . . . . . 139

Helga Schwalm

Lives of the Physicians – Samuel Johnson, Medicine and Biography . . . 157

Birgit Mara Kaiser

Electrified Humans – Of Inhuman Affects in Heinrich von Kleist . . . . 171

Ute Berns

Artificial Life, Science and Reflexivity in James Whale's Frankenstein . . 187