

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword: What do we mean by ‘WEIMAR CLASSICISM?’ Professor Cyrus Hamlin (Yale University)	i
Foreword: Professor Ellis Dye (Macalester College)	xi
Preface: David Gallagher	xv
Acknowledgements	xxiii
Introduction: David Gallagher	1
Chapter 1: Weimar Classicism: Goethe’s alliance with Schiller T. J. Reed (The Queen’s College, Oxford)	21
Chapter 2: Navigating Gender: Georg Forster in the Pacific and Emilie von Berlepsch in Scotland Ruth P. Dawson (University of Hawaii, Manoa)	39
Chapter 3: Blank Verse Theatre Texts and Weimar Classicism Friederike von Schwerin-High (Pomona College)	65
Chapter 4: Personal Classicism: Greek and Roman Antiquity in Wieland’s Correspondence Ellis Shookman (Dartmouth College)	99
Chapter 5: Complex Classicism and Roman Romanticism: Reflections on ancient Roman Literature around 1800 Angela Holzer (Princeton University)	123
Chapter 6: Weimar Classicism and Modern Spiritual Drama: Rudolf Steiner’s Theatre of Spiritual Realism Christian Clement (Brigham Young University)	135

Chapter 7: Shakespeare's Hamlet and Goethe's Wilhelm Meisters Lehrjahre	155
David Gallagher (Royal Holloway, University of London)
Chapter 8: On the Periphery of Weimar Classicism: Passion, Patriarchy and Political Machinations in Caroline von Wolzogen's Agnes von Lilien (1797) and Barbara Honigmann's Eine Liebe aus nichts (1991)	183
Dennis Mahoney (University of Vermont)
Appendix	207
Notes	209
Bibliography	239
Index	259