

CONTENTS

	Series editor's preface	viii
	Author preface	ix
1	Locke's life and work	1
	Locke's life and times	1
	The structure of the Essay and its place in Locke's work	4
	Contemporary reception of the Essay	8
	The place of the Essay in the history of philosophy	11
2	Ideas	15
	The historical background to Locke's critique of innatism	15
	Locke's uses of the term 'idea'	19
	Locke's arguments against innate ideas	22
	A modern nativist's response to Locke	28
3	Perception	34
	Ideas and sense perception	34
	The traditional interpretation of Locke's view	37
	An 'adverbialist' interpretation of Locke	41

	Locke's account of secondary qualities as powers	47
	Berkeley's critique of the distinction between primary and secondary qualities	53
	In defence of a moderate representationalism	59
4	Substance	66
	A brief history of the notion of substance	66
	Locke on individual substances and substance in general	71
	Locke's distinction between 'real' and 'nominal' essences	77
	The criticisms of Berkeley and Hume	82
	The revival of substance in modern ontology	86
5	Identity	91
	Sortal terms and criteria of identity	91
	Locke on the identity of matter and organisms	95
	Locke on persons and personal identity	100
	Difficulties for Locke's account of personal identity	106
	In defence of the substantial self	112
6	Action	118
	Locke on volition and voluntary action	118
	Some questions and answers about volitions	123
	Locke on voluntariness and necessity	127
	Locke on 'free will'	131
	Volitionism vindicated	136
7	Language	141
	Words, thoughts and things	141
	Locke's ideational theory of linguistic signification	145
	Locke's theory of abstraction	152
	Problems with abstract general ideas	156
	A neo-Lockean view of language and thought	163
8	Knowledge	170
	Intuition and experience	170
	Reality and truth	174

Reason, probability and faith	180
The extent and limits of human knowledge	186
Epilogue: The legacy of Locke's Essay	193
Bibliography	199
Index	203