

Contents

Dedication	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
Abbreviations and conventions	xiii
1. Introduction: Sociability and sceptical sentimentalism	1
2. Intellectual change in Bernard Mandeville	41
i. Hobbism in The Fable of the bees	41
ii. The critique of Hobbism in the 1720s	49
iii. Part II and the history of civil society	65
3. The publishing history of The Fable of the bees	103
i. Mandeville's publishers and the question of copyright ownership	114
ii. Jacob Tonson the younger and The Fable of the bees	120
iii. Part II and Origin of honour	130
4. Social theory in A Treatise of human nature	147
i. Hutchesonian leanings and anatomy of morals	147
ii. Hume's distance from The Fable of the bees and his attachment to Mandeville	157
iii. Self-love and justice	181
iv. Self-liking and politeness	194
v. Government and political sociability	227
5. Epilogue	243
Bibliography	249
Index	275