

Contents

Preface xiii

PART ONE

A Reader Expectation Approach to Writing 1

---

Chapter 1

The Problems of Interpretation and the Efficacy of a Reader Expectation Approach 3

Synthetic Problems 5

The Detection of Error 6

Observations on Context 6

Failure-proof Students 7

*Problems That Arise When We Turn
Our Attention to the Reader* 9

Expectations and Reader Energy 16

---

Chapter 2

Action and Agency 22

Single Actions 23

A String of Actions 36

Agency 46

A Few Pedagogical Hints Reviewed 54

---

Chapter 3

Subject-Verb-Complement Separations 57

Chapter 4

---

*Beginnings and Endings:
The Topic and Stress Positions* 77

Structure, Substance, Context, and Some Helpful Boxes 77

Whose Story? 80

The Topic Position 88

Connections Between Sentences 88

Old Information 90

A Few Pedagogical Hints 99

The Stress Position 101

Saving the Best for Last 101

Multiple Stress Positions 108

Fred and His Dog: Competition for Emphasis 119

Grammar and Spelling, Too 129

Summary 131

Chapter 5

---

*Using Topic/Stress to Control Development
Within the Paragraph* 137

Overcoming Splat Prose 137

Style and the Consistency of Choice 145

Using Topic/Stress to Solve Typical Student

Writing Problems 150

The Ab Ovo Beginning 150

The Nondeveloping Paragraph 151

The Writer as Hunter and Gatherer 154

The Multiple Uses of the Stress Position 159

That's All, Folks 160

Heeeeere's Johnny! 160

Multiple Strands 161

Epistrophic Emphasis 161

The Intentional Anticlimax 161

Topic Changing and Topic Stringing 162

Topic Changing 163

Topic Stringing 165

Topic Strings and Lexical Strings	169
Exerting Control over Revision Through Topic Stringing	178
Seeking Control over Reader Response	184
The Tollbooth Syndrome	189

---

 Chapter 6

---

Paragraphs: Issues, Points, and Purposes 194

Procrustean Problems in Teaching the Paragraph	194
Issue	197
Point	212
Point Placement and Paragraph Types	223
First Paragraphs	223
Last Paragraphs	225
Most Medial Paragraphs	226
Medial Paragraphs: Clear, with Dramatic Point	227
Medial Paragraphs: Complex, with Dramatic Point	227
A Note on One-sentence Paragraphs	228
A Typology of Paragraphs?	228
A Reprise of Fluidity	232
Purpose	233
The Writer's Power to Shape and Change Reader Expectations Concerning Paragraph Structure	236
Pointless Paragraphs	242
Connections Between Paragraphs	251
A Note on Whole Documents	257

P A R T T W O

Pedagogy 261

---

 Chapter 7

---

Learning and Teaching the Reader Expectation
Approach 263

Learning to Teach Writing from the Perspective of Reader Expectations 263
    Putting the Reader Expectation Approach to Work 263
    Advice Especially for Those Who Are Teaching for the First Time 268
    De-writing 272
    Ten Practical Teaching Questions 279

Supplementary Techniques and Related Concerns 288
    Freshmen, Rules, and Power 288
    Peer Evaluation 290
        A Procedure for Peer Evaluation 290
        Gains for the Student 291
        Gains for the Instructor 295
        Student Complaints and Some Responses 296
    Double Submissions of Papers 298
    Teaching Grammar 299
    Teaching Transitions 302

The Most Common Student Objections to the Reader Expectation Approach 304
    An Example 307

Chapter 8

---

"I Knew That" 324

Two Typical Responses 324
Herbert Spencer's "Philosophy of Style" 325
Where Are the Linguists When We Need Them? 330
The Prague School of Linguistics and Functional Sentence Perspective 332
Thrusts and Parries 340
Epilogue 352

P A R T T H R E E

Appendixes 355

- Appendix A: A Structural Definition of Rhetoric 357*
Appendix B: A Backward Look at Error Avoidance 369
Appendix C: Reader/Listener Expectations from the Past 379
Appendix D: Works Cited 387

Index 391