1 The Framework	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 Constructional approaches to language	2
1.2.1 Berkeley Construction Grammar	3
1.2.2 Sign-Based Construction Grammar	4
1.2.3 Cognitive Construction Grammar	4
1.2.4 Radical Construction Grammar	6
1.2.5 Cognitive Grammar	7
1.2.6 Our representation of constructions	8
1.3 Networks and construction grammar	8
1.4 Constructions and factors relevant to them	11
1.4.1 Constructions characterized	11
1.4.2 Schematicity, productivity, and compositionality	13
1.4.2.1 Schematicity	13
1.4.2.2 Productivity	17
1.4.2.3 Compositionality	19
1.5 A constructional view of change	20
1.5.1 A characterization and example of constructionalization	22
1.5.2 Constructional changes	26
1.5.3 The relation of constructional changes to constructionalization	27
1.5.4 Instantaneous constructionalization	29
1.6 Diachronic work particularly relevant to this book	30
1.6.1 ‘Construction’ as used in earlier historical linguistics	31
1.6.2 Grammaticalization	32
1.6.3 Lexicalization	33
1.6.4 Mechanisms of change	35
1.6.4.1 Neoanalysis (‘reanalysis’)	35
1.6.4.2 Analogization (‘analogy’)	37
1.6.5 Work on diachronic construction grammar	39

1.7	Evidence	40
1.8	Summary and outline of the book	43
2	A Usage-Based Approach to Sign Change	45
2.1	Introduction	45
2.2	Usage-based models	46
2.2.1	Storage as a unit	48
2.2.2	Sanction	49
2.3	Networks in a usage-based model	50
2.3.1	The relationship between networks, language processing, and language learning	51
2.3.2	Spreading activation	54
2.3.3	Implications for 'analogy'	56
2.4	Types of links	59
2.4.1	Relational links	59
2.4.2	Inheritance links	61
2.5	Growth, obsolescence, and reconfiguration in a network	62
2.5.1	The life-cycle of constructions	62
2.5.1.1	Growth at the margins	63
2.5.1.2	Staying at the margins	64
2.5.1.3	Marginalization and loss of a construction	65
2.5.2	Reconfiguration of links	71
2.6	Categories, gradience, and gradualness	73
2.7	A case study: the development of the way -construction revisited	76
2.7.1	The way -construction in PDE	76
2.7.2	Precursors of the way -construction	79
2.7.3	Constructionalization of the way -construction	83
2.7.4	Further expansion of the way -construction	86
2.7.5	Growth of the way -construction in a network	89
2.7.6	The status of the way -construction on the lexical-grammatical gradient	90
2.8	Summary and some questions	91
3	Grammatical Constructionalization	94
3.1	Introduction	94
3.2	Approaches to grammaticalization	96
3.2.1	Grammaticalization as reduction and increased dependency	100
3.2.2	Grammaticalization as expansion	105
3.2.3	The interconnectedness of the GR and GE approaches	108
3.3	A constructional approach to directionality	112
3.3.1	Increase in productivity	113

3.3.2 Increase in schematicity	116
3.3.3 Decrease in compositionality	120
3.3.4 The interweaving of GR and GE factors in constructionalization and constructional change	123
3.3.5 Possible motivations for directionality of change	124
3.4 Rethinking degrammaticalization in terms of constructionalization	127
3.4.1 Deinflectionalization	128
3.4.2 Debonding	131
3.4.3 A caution against projecting original uses from the present	132
3.5 A case study: the development of ALL- and WHAT-pseudo-clefts	136
3.5.1 Precursors of ALL- and WHAT-pseudo-clefts	139
3.5.2 Early pseudo-clefts	141
3.5.3 The later history of ALL- and WHAT-pseudo-clefts	142
3.5.4 Discussion	145
3.6 Summary	147
4 Lexical Constructionalization	149
4.1 Introduction	149
4.2 On some characteristics of lexical constructions	150
4.3 Some approaches to lexicalization	156
4.3.1 Alleged discrete outputs of lexicalization and grammaticalization	156
4.3.2 Lexicalization as entry into the inventory	160
4.3.3 Toward rethinking views of lexicalization in the light of lexical constructionalization	161
4.4 Changing productivity, schematicity, and compositionality in lexical constructionalization	163
4.4.1 Productivity	164
4.4.2 Schematicity	165
4.4.3 Compositionality	166
4.5 The development of lexical (sub)schemas	168
4.5.1 OE DOM	170
4.5.2 OE RÆDEN	173
4.5.3 Choices among nominal affixoids in OE and ME	175
4.6 The development of atomic lexical constructions	177
4.7 Lexical constructionalization of clauses and phrases	182
4.8 On the instantaneous development of some lexical constructions	186
4.9 Lexical constructionalization and degrammaticalization	190
4.10 Summary	192

5	Contexts for Constructionalization	195
5.1	Introduction	195
5.2	A framework for thinking about contexts	198
5.2.1	Key contextual factors in pre-constructionalization	198
5.2.2	Post-constructionalization contextual changes	203
5.3	Types of contexts for constructionalization	207
5.3.1	Contexts for the development of word-formation schemas: -dom, -ræden, and -lac	207
5.3.2	Partitive contexts for the development of binominal quantifiers: a lot of	209
5.3.3	Contexts for the development of an adjective of difference into a quantifier: several	214
5.3.4	Contexts for the development of future BE going to	217
5.3.5	Slots as contexts for the development of snowclones: not the ADJest N<sub>1</sub> in the N<sub>2</sub>	224
5.3.6	Contexts for the rise of pseudo-clefts	225
5.4	Persistence of enabling contexts	227
5.5	Summary	230
6	Review and Future Prospects	231
6.1	Introduction	231
6.2	The major objectives	231
6.2.1	A summative example: 1SH	233
6.3	Some areas for further research	237
