

Contents

General Editor's Preface	ix
Family Tree of the Houses of Lancaster and York, and the Early Tudors	x
Introduction	1
Part 1: ANALYSING SHAKESPEARE'S HISTORIES
1 Richard II: History as Tragedy	7
Context Passage 1: 1.1.78–117	8
Context Passage 2: 2.1.29–68	19
Context Passage 3: 3.4.29–82	31
Context Passage 4: 4.1.162–214	47
Conclusions	59
Suggested Work	63
2 Henry IV Part 1: History as Comedy	64
Context Passage 1: 1.1.52–89	66
Context Passage 2: 2.4.298–346	76
Context Passage 3: 4.1.42–85	88
Context Passage 4: 5.1.118–38	99
Conclusions	108
Suggested Work	110
3 Henry IV Part 2: History as Carnival	111
Context Passage 1: The Induction , 1–40	113
Context Passage 2: 1.3.85–110	124
Context Passage 3: 3.1.1–39	134
Context Passage 4: 5.5.21–55	147
Conclusions	157
Suggested Work	159

4	Richard III: History as Problem Play?	160
	Context Passage 1: 1.1.1–31	162
	Context Passage 2: 1.3.143–80	173
	Context Passage 3: 3.5.72–109	183
	Conscience and Machiavelli in Richard III	191
	Context Passage 4: 5.3.180–209	196
	Henry Tudor, Duke of Richmond	204
	Is Richard III a problem play?	205
	Conclusions to the Histories	209
	Suggested Work	210
	Methods of Analysis	212
Part 2: THE CONTEXT AND THE CRITICS
5	Shakespeare and the Writing of History in the Elizabethan Period	217
	History: Myth v. Fact	218
	The Chronicle History Plays	222
	Shakespeare's Historical Sources	224
	Shakespeare's Adaptations	230
6	A Sample of Critical Views	233
	E.M.W. Tillyard	235
	Graham Holderness	239
	Tom McAlindon	242
	General currents in late twentieth-century critical theory	246
	Alison Thorne	248
	Glossary of Literary Terms	253
	Further Reading	256
	Index	261