

CONTENTS

	page
a) Coastal Region	1
b) Rayalaseema	3
c) Telangana	3
A factorial approach to the study of regional structure	5
Dimensions of regional structure	9
Factor 1: Urbanization and modernity	9
Factor 2: Rural Andhra and traditionalism	13
Factors 3, 8, 11, 12 and 13: Female participation in the labor force	13
Factor 5: Densities	13
Factors 4 and 6: Additional characteristics of land use	15
Factor 7: The scheduled castes	17
Factor 9: Size of areal units	17
Factor 10: Urban land use in tehsils	17
The challenge to regional planning of an urban-rural dichotomy	17
1. A regional economy is open to the outside world, subject to external influence	21
2. Regional economic growth is externally induced	21
3. Export sector growth translates into residentiary sector growth	21
4. Local leadership is critical in the adjustment to external change	21
5. Regional economic growth is a problem in the location of firms	21
6. Economic growth takes place in a matrix of urban regions through which the space economy is organized	23
7. When economic growth is sustained over long periods, it results in progressive integration of the space of economy	25
Failure of trickle-down mechanisms and spatial effects in India ..	25
Policy implications	27
Table 1 Andhra: Regional structure of land use, employment and related variables	32
Table 2 Factor scores: Andhra tehsils	36
Zusammenfassung	49