

Table of contents

Preface & Acknowledgments	XI
List of abbreviations	XIII
CHAPTER 1
Preliminaries	1
1.1 Aims of the book	1
1.2 Structure of the book	3
CHAPTER 2
Nominal classification systems: An overview	7
2.1 Introduction	7
2.2 Terms and definitions	7
2.3 Gender/noun classes vs. classifiers	9
2.4 Gender	11
2.4.1 Introduction	11
2.4.2 Gender assignment	12
2.4.2.1 Semantic assignment	12
2.4.2.2 Morphological assignment	16
2.4.2.3 Phonological assignment	18
2.4.3 Gender agreement	21
2.4.3.1 Morphosyntactic realization of agreement	21
2.4.3.2 Semantic vs. syntactic agreement and non-prototypical controllers	24
2.4.3.3 Constraints and variability in agreement	26
2.4.4 Diachrony of gender systems	27
2.4.4.1 Origin	27
2.4.4.2 Development	29
2.4.4.3 Reduction and loss	31
2.5 Classifiers	32
2.5.1 Introduction	32
2.5.2 Types of classifiers	33
2.5.2.1 Numeral classifiers	33
2.5.2.2 Noun classifiers	36
2.5.2.3 Genitive classifiers	37

2.5.2.4	Verbal classifiers	40
2.5.2.5	Deictic and locative classifiers	44
2.5.3	Semantics of classifiers	45
2.5.3.1	Applicability and semantic complexity of classifiers	45
2.5.3.2	Semantic properties and classifier type	46
2.5.4	Diachrony of classifiers	52
2.5.4.1	Origin and development	52
2.5.4.2	Loss	53
2.6	Complex systems	54
2.7	Concluding observations	57

CHAPTER 3

From Protagoras to the philosophical grammars 59

3.1	Introduction	59
3.2	Classical studies	59
3.2.1	Introduction	59
3.2.2	Greek and Alexandrian scholarship	60
3.2.2.1	Terminology and controversies	60
3.2.2.2	From Protagoras to Aristotle	65
3.2.2.3	Alexandria	68
3.2.3	Rome and Late Latin grammarians	74
3.2.3.1	Varro and Quintilian	75
3.2.3.2	Late Latin grammarians	77
3.2.4	Concluding remarks	82
3.3	The Middle Ages	83
3.3.1	Introduction	83
3.3.2	Early and Central Middle Ages	83
3.3.2.1	Early Middle Ages	85
3.3.2.2	Central Middle Ages	86
3.3.3	Late Middle Ages: Speculative grammars and nominalism	89
3.3.3.1	Speculative grammars	89
3.3.3.2	The Modistae	93
3.3.3.3	Criticism of the Modistae	95
3.3.4	Concluding remarks	97
3.4	Discussions during the 15th–18th centuries	98
3.4.1	Introduction	98
3.4.2	General and particular grammars	98
3.4.3	Universal languages	105
3.4.4	Grammars of non-Indo-European languages	108
3.4.5	Gender in Algonquian and Iroquoian	110
3.5	Concluding observations	115

CHAPTER 4

From the 'Romantics' to the Neogrammarians 117

- 4.1 Introduction 117
- 4.2 Studies of non-Indo-European languages 118
- 4.3 The 'Romantics' 119
 - 4.3.1 Introduction 119
 - 4.3.2 From Herder to Humboldt 120
 - 4.3.3 Grimm and his successors 128
- 4.4 The Neogrammarian critique 132
 - 4.4.1 Introduction 132
 - 4.4.2 Exchange between Brugmann and Roethe 133
 - 4.4.3 After Brugmann 141
 - 4.4.4 The 'Romantics' vs. the Neogrammarians: A summary 143
- 4.5 Gender in Algonquian and Iroquoian 144
- 4.6 Functions and correlates of nominal classification 148
 - 4.6.1 Introduction 148
 - 4.6.2 'Value' of gender 148
 - 4.6.3 Male and female features 150
 - 4.6.4 Cognitive and cultural correlates of gender and classifiers 153
- 4.7 Concluding observations 157

CHAPTER 5

Structuralism 159

- 5.1 Introduction 159
- 5.2 Studies of gender/noun classes 159
 - 5.2.1 Introduction 159
 - 5.2.2 Descriptive studies of Indo-European and Bantu languages 160
 - 5.2.3 Diachrony of Indo-European gender 167
 - 5.2.4 American structuralism 173
- 5.3 Studies of classifiers 180
- 5.4 Social and cultural correlates 185
 - 5.4.1 Introduction 185
 - 5.4.2 Indo-European and Semitic gender 185
 - 5.4.3 Gender in Algonquian 193
 - 5.4.4 Cherokee verbs for "wash" 196
- 5.5 Concluding observations 197

CHAPTER 6

Contemporary studies of gender/noun classes

199

- 6.1 Introduction 199
- 6.2 Studies of nominal classification 199
- 6.3 Gender/noun class assignment 204
 - 6.3.1 Introduction 204
 - 6.3.2 Semantically arbitrary gender 204
 - 6.3.2.1 Arbitrariness of grammatical gender in Indo-European 205
 - 6.3.2.2 Indo-European gender and Bantu noun classes as examples of arbitrariness 207
 - 6.3.2.3 Gender/noun classes compared with classifiers 208
 - 6.3.3 Not arbitrary, not regular: The magic of gender assignment 210
 - 6.3.3.1 Semantic basis of gender systems 210
 - 6.3.3.2 Semantic organization of gender 212
 - 6.3.3.3 Status of assignment rules 217
 - 6.3.3.4 Methodological issues 221
- 6.4 Functionality of gender/noun classes 225
 - 6.4.1 Introduction 225
 - 6.4.2 Linguistic 'male nipples' 225
 - 6.4.2.1 Redundancy of Indo-European gender 226
 - 6.4.2.2 Gender and linguistic complexity 226
 - 6.4.2.3 Functionality of gender vs. classifiers 231
 - 6.4.3 Semantic functions of gender 232
 - 6.4.3.1 Expansion of the lexicon 234
 - 6.4.3.2 Variable classification 240
 - 6.4.3.3 Individuation 242
 - 6.4.3.4 Ascribing properties to referents 245
 - 6.4.4 Discourse functions of gender 250
 - 6.4.4.1 Reference identification 251
 - 6.4.4.2 Reference management 255
 - 6.4.4.3 Re-presentation of referents 258
 - 6.4.5 Functional relationships 263
 - 6.4.6 Functionality and motivation 267
- 6.5 Concluding observations 272

CHAPTER 7

Contemporary studies of classifiers	273
7.1 Introduction	273
7.2 Semantic motivation of classifiers	273
7.2.1 Early accounts of classifiers	274
7.2.2 Semantic organization of classifier systems	278
7.2.3 Classifier choice and predictability	280
7.3 Functionality of classifiers	284
7.3.1 Introduction	284
7.3.2 What are classifiers for?	284
7.3.2.1 Studies of numeral classifiers	284
7.3.2.2 Studies of noun classifiers	289
7.3.2.3 Terminology and glossing	291
7.3.3 Semantic functions of classifiers	295
7.3.3.1 Expansion of the lexicon	295
7.3.3.2 Variable classification	297
7.3.3.3 Individuation	304
7.3.3.4 Ascribing properties to referents	309
7.3.4 Discourse functions of classifiers	312
7.3.4.1 Reference identification	312
7.3.4.2 Reference management	314
7.3.4.3 Re-presentation of referents	318
7.4 Concluding observations	319

CHAPTER 8

Final discussion	321
8.1 Introduction	321
8.2 Motifs	321
8.2.1 Motivation vs. arbitrariness	322
8.2.2 Functionality vs. redundancy	326
8.2.3 Motivation and functionality	331
8.3 Conceptual projections	333
8.4 Prospects	335
References	337
Index of biographical names	381
Index of subjects and terms	391
Language index	401