

Contents

Figures /vi
Tables /viii
Foreword /x
Acknowledgements /x
Preface /xi
1 Metropolitan growth in Canada
1.1 A metropolitan nation /2
1.2 Metropolitan growth differentials /2
1.3 The demographic components of metropolitan growth, 1966-71 /4
2 Why neighbourhoods differ
2.1 Introduction /18
2.2 Residential selection and the divisions of Canadian society /18
2.3 The role of the property industry /19
2.4 The role of governments /20
2.5 The historical legacy /20
2.6 Summary /20
3 The family life cycle
3.1 Introduction /22
3.2 Metropolitan differences in age structure and family size /22
3.3 Age structure and housing characteristics /23
3.4 Segregation of age groups /25
3.5 A family life-cycle index /27
3.6 The spatial pattern of age groups /31
3.7 Technical appendix /32
4 Income disparities in Metropolitan Canada
4.1 Introduction /38
4.2 Metropolitan differences in income and education /38
4.3 Segregation of income groups /42
4.4 The right and wrong side of the tracks /48
5 The cultural mosaic of Metropolitan Canada
5.1 Introduction /70
5.2 Metropolitan differences in cultural characteristics /70
5.3 Ethnic group assimilation /74
5.4 Segregation of ethnic groups /84
5.5 Ethnic neighbourhoods /89
5.6 An index of ethnic diversity /113
5.7 Conclusion /116
6 Neighbourhood types: the interdependence of the family life cycle, income and ethnicity
6.1 Introduction /124
6.2 Income and the family life cycle /124
6.3 The family life cycle and ethnicity /125
6.4 Income and ethnicity /126
6.5 Conclusion /128
Technical note: Cartography /133
David H. Douglas
Glossary /137	