
Contents

List of abbreviations	vii
Acknowledgements	x
Introduction	1
1 Pragmatics and philosophy: What we do when we speak and what we actually mean – speech act theory and the theory of conversational implicature	11
1.1 Introduction	11
1.2 John Austin’s speech act theory	12
1.3 John Searle’s speech act theory	19
1.4 Pieter Seuren on the socially binding force of speech acts	31
1.5 Maxims that guide conversation: H. Paul Grice’s theory of conversational implicature	33
1.6 Concluding remarks	39
1.7 Exercise/work section	40
1.8 Suggestions for further reading	41
Notes	41
2 Pragmatics and psychology: Deictic reference and gesture	42
2.1 Introduction	42
2.2 Deictic reference	43
2.3 Spatial deixis	45
2.4 Gesture	62
2.5 Concluding remarks	75
2.6 Exercise/work section	76
2.7 Suggestions for further reading	77
Notes	77
3 Pragmatics and human ethology: Biological foundations of communicative behaviour	79
3.1 Introduction	79
3.2 Expressive movements and their ritualization into signals	80
3.3 Rituals, ritual communication and interaction strategies	86
3.4 Concluding remarks	100
3.5 Exercise/work section	101

3.6	Suggestions for further reading	102
	Notes	102
4	Pragmatics and ethnology: The interface of language, culture and cognition	104
4.1	Introduction	104
4.2	Phatic communion	104
4.3	Linguistic relativity: the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis	113
4.4	The ethnography of speaking	120
4.5	Concluding remarks	129
4.6	Exercise/work section	130
4.7	Suggestions for further reading	131
	Notes	131
5	Pragmatics and sociology: Everyday social interaction	133
5.1	Introduction	133
5.2	Erving Goffman's interaction order	133
5.3	Harold Garfinkel's ethnomethodology	142
5.4	Harvey Sacks and Conversation Analysis	146
5.5	Concluding remarks	159
5.6	Exercise/work section	160
5.7	Suggestions for further reading	161
	Notes	161
6	Pragmatics and politics: Language, social class, ethnicity and education and linguistic ideologies	162
6.1	Introduction	162
6.2	Basil Bernstein's code theory	163
6.3	William Labov and the variability concept	165
6.4	Language ideologies	169
6.5	Concluding remarks	181
6.6	Exercise/work section	182
6.7	Suggestions for further reading	183
	Notes	183
7	Understanding pragmatics: Summary and outlook	185
7.1	Introduction	185
7.2	Summary	185
7.3	A brief outlook on future developments within the discipline: Emancipatory pragmatics	189
	Note	190
	References	191
	Index	212