

Contents

Preface	ix
Introduction: Heidegger's project (§§1–8)	1
The question of Being	1
Reclaiming the question	8
The priority of Dasein	12
Philosophy, history and phenomenology	18
Conclusion: Heidegger's design	26
1 The human world: scepticism, cognition and agency (§§9–24)	35
The Cartesian critique (§§12–13)	39
The worldhood of the world (§§14–24)	46
2 The human world: society, selfhood and self-interpretation (§§25–32)	61
Individuality and community (§§25–27)	62
Passions and projects (§§28–32)	74

3 Language, truth and reality (§§33–34, 43–44)	89
Language: assertions and discourse (§§33–34)	90
Reality and truth (§§43–44)	94
4 Conclusion to Division One: the uncanniness of everyday life (§§34–42)	105
Falling into the world (§§34–38)	105
Anxiety and care (§§39–42)	109
5 Theology secularized: mortality, guilt and conscience (§§45–60)	113
Death and mortality (§§46–53)	114
Excursus: Heidegger and Kierkegaard	121
Guilt and conscience (§§54–60)	125
The attestation of Being and Time	130
6 Heidegger's (re)visionary moment: time as the human horizon (§§61–71)	137
Mortality and nullity: the form of human finitude (§§61–62)	138
Philosophical integrity and authenticity (§§62–64)	140
The temporality of care: thrown projection (§§65–68)	143
The temporality of care: Being in the world (§§69–70)	154
Repetition and projection (§71)	161
7 Fate and destiny: human natality and a brief history of time (§§72–82)	165
History and historicity (§§72–75)	165
The lessons of history (§§76–77)	174
On Being within time (§§78–82)	182

8 Conclusion to Division Two: Philosophical endings – the horizon of Being and Time (§83)	191
Human Being and the question of Being in general	191
Bibliography	197
Index	199