

Table of contents

Introduction	10
Mechanisms of social vulnerability in fragile states	10
Politically motivated social exclusion undermines climate resilience of vulnerable groups	10
Lack of governance capacity undermines climate resilience of vulnerable groups	11
Extreme weather events and stressors to development in fragile states	11
Structure of this paper	12
Part 1
How do socially vulnerable groups from fragile states experience climatic stressors?	13
1.1 Perceptions of climate stressors in fragile states	13
1.2 Implications of climate change for socially vulnerable groups in fragile states	13
Social cohesion	13
Livelihoods	14
Conflict	15
1.3 Human mobility in the context of climate adaptation and fragile states	16
Expert reflections on fragile states, mobility and climate stressors	19
Refugees' comments on experiences with internal movement	19
Refugees' comments on experiences with cross-border movement	22
Part 2
Policy reflections for adaptation and resilience building in fragile states	23
2.1 Developing strategies for adaptation in fragile states	23
In situ adaption	23
Change in aid delivery	24
Long-term commitment	25
Avoiding policies that incentivize mal-adaptation	25
Education and information	26
Effective natural resource management	27
2.2 Building resilience and peace among socially vulnerable groups	28
Role of women in peace building	28
Children and youth in fragile states	29
Local and community level	30
Head of state and governments	30
Regional organizations	31
International community	32
Transboundary level	32
Conclusion	33
References	34