

Contents

Foreword, Acknowledgements	7
----------------------------	---

Part I: General considerations

1. Emotions: what they are, and why language historians should care	13
2. Pragmatic aspects of the psychological experiment	65
3. Historical Semantics, corpora, and the unity of English Studies	77
4. “Cultural” vs. “historical” explanation: the case of the English emotion lexicon	97

Part II: Growth of Semantic Fields

5. Measuring the growth of semantic fields: the case of the English emotion lexicon	107
6. Contempt: the main growth area in the Elizabethan emotion lexicon	119

Part III: Exemplary Word Studies:

IIIA: Mōd / Mood & Co.

7. European concepts and English words: the case of Old English mōd	135
8. Old English mōdig : Cognitive Semantics and cultural contact	149
9. Discourse, matrix and genre in Historical Semantics: OE ofermōd (and ModE emotion)	159
10. The decline of the family of mōd : ICAMET and other corpora	167
11. Mood in Middle English	181
12. Medieval “with a mood” and modern “in a mood”: changing a metaphor we live by.	191
13. Mood in Renaissance poetry – and in “Google Books”	201

IIIB: Wrath, Anger & Co.

14. ANGER and TĒNE in Middle English	219
15. Ssoong on Ifaluk, ANGER and WRATH in Middle English: Historical Semantics as bridge-builder	233
16. Wrath and anger in the time of Shakespeare	249
17. Culturomics and genre: wrath and anger in the 17 th century	261

IIIC: Positive Emotions

18. Why JOY ? Was BLISS not good enough?	271
19. JOY and MIRTH in Middle English (and a little bit in Old): a plea for the consideration of genre in Historical Semantics	279
20. Happy in changing contexts: The history of word-use and the metamorphoses of a concept	295

Part IV: The Demise and Emergence of Superordinate Categories

21. 'Emotion' in Old English – a lexical gap?	319
22. Affection, passion, feeling, stirring : towards a pre-history of the category 'emotion'	331
23. Chaucer's emotion lexicon	337
24. From mōd to emotion (or almost): the medieval gestation of a modern concept	351
25. Emotion vs. Passion : the history of word-use and the emergence of an a-moral category	371
Afterword: Historical Semantics and the rest of English Studies	393
26. References	395
Subject Index	435
Index of authors and anonymous works	441