

Contents

Preface	vii
I. Introduction: The Arusha Declaration	1
An End and a Beginning	3
The Imperative of Rural Development	11
The Arusha Declaration and the Rural Areas	16
II. Local Political Systems: A Theoretical Comment	19
Immediate, Intermediate, and National Political Systems	20
System-to-System Relationships	22
The Approach and the Methods	35
III. Rural Development in Tanzania	39
German Period	40
British Period	42
Postindependence Efforts to Promote Rural Development: Continuity and Change	48
IV. The Developmental Environment	79
The Physical Environment	79
The Cultural Environment	84
V. The District Boma : National Outpost	107
Colonial Intrusions	109
The District Boma	113
District Officers: Technicians	120
District Council	122
The Political Party: Instrument of Fusion	131

CONTENTS

	District Development and Planning Committee	138
	Summary	142
VI.	From Boma to Village	145
	Division	145
	Ward	154
	Village	166
	Ten-House Cell	169
VII.	Village and State: Systems in Action	185
	Sharing of Functions	185
	Intersystem Roles: The Question of Dominance	209
	The District Councilor: Perceptions of Roles	213
	Intersystemic Inputs and Outputs	229
VIII.	The Village, the State, and Rural Development	251
	The Interim Result: Accommodation, Acquiescence, Withdrawal	253
	The Center-Periphery Nexus: An Assessment	257
	The Development of Subsystems: A Threat to National Direction?	259
	Selected Bibliography	261
	Index	275