

Contents

0	Introduction — 1
0.1	Out of Which Hat — 1
0.2	Why Experience, and Why This Book — 8
0.3	Why This Book Is Not an Empirical Study — 11
0.4	Cognitive Science: A Thumbnail Sketch — 16
0.4.1	From Computational Models to Enactivism — 16
0.4.2	Conceptual Thought and Embodiment — 19
0.4.3	The Self, Folk Psychology, and Phenomenology — 21
0.5	Outline of Chapters — 23

Part I: Notes for a Theory of Experientiality

1	Not So Easy: Representation, Experience, Expression — 29
1.1	From Representation to Expression — 33
1.2	On Characters' Experiences — 38
1.3	Expressive Devices — 41
2	The Existential Burn: Storytelling and the Background — 45
2.1	The Network of Experientiality — 52
2.2	Focus on the Experiential Background — 55
2.2.1	Opening Moves — 55
2.2.2	Mapping the Background — 56
2.2.3	Narrative and the Background — 64
3	Experience, Interaction, and Play in Julio Cortázar's Hopscotch — 72
3.1	Dewey and Winnicott on Experience — 75
3.2	A Third Possibility — 80
3.3	Other Paths: Beyond Vertical Transcendence — 82
3.4	Bringing the Strands Together — 87

Part II: From Experiential Traces to Fictional Consciousnesses

4	Blind Reading: Bodily and Perceptual Responses to Narrative — 93
4.1	The Enactivist Theory of Experience — 97

- 4.2 Enacting Narrative Space — 100
- 4.3 Enacting Characters' Bodily-Perceptual Experiences — 103
- 4.4 Enacting Qualia Through Metaphorical Language — 105
- 5 Fictional Consciousnesses: From Attribution to Enactment — 110
 - 5.1 Consciousness-Attribution — 115
 - 5.2 Enacting Benjy: A Slow-Motion Analysis — 118
 - 5.3 Consciousness-Enactment — 122
 - 5.3.1 What Is Consciousness-Enactment? — 122
 - 5.3.2 Triggers of Consciousness-Enactment — 125
 - 5.3.3 Mental Simulation as the Cognitive Basis for Consciousness-Enactment — 129
- 6 Fictional Consciousnesses: Self-Narratives and Intersubjectivity — 133
 - 6.1 Narrative Selves? — 135
 - 6.2 Focus on Self-Narratives — 139
 - 6.3 Engaging with Characters: Between Primary and Secondary Intersubjectivity — 142
 - 6.4 Readers and Characters in Ian McEwan's On Chesil Beach: A Case Study — 144

Part III: Embodied Engagements and Their Effects

- 7 Embodiment, Virtuality, and Meaning in Readers' Reconstruction of Narrative Space — 155
 - 7.1 From Mental Simulation to Fictionalization — 159
 - 7.2 Fictional Anchors: Forster's Deputy Focalizer and "Strict" Focalization — 162
 - 7.3 Virtual Presences: "Empty Center" and Aperspectival Texts — 168
 - 7.4 A Scale of Fictionalization — 173
 - 7.5 The Embodied Self and Beckett's Company — 174
- 8 Mental Myopia: Narrative Patterns and Experiential Texture in Vladimir Nabokov's The Defense — 181
 - 8.1 From Chess Consciousness to Experiential Blindness — 184
 - 8.2 The Moves of His Life — 188
 - 8.3 Beyond? — 194
 - 8.4 Three Functions of Narrative: Overreading The Defense — 200

9 Conclusion: Where to Go from Here? — 206

Works Cited — 209

Index — 227