

Contents

A Note on Names and Places	xi
Prologue	I
Chapter One: Asia Subordinated	12
Egypt: 'The Beginning of a Series of Great Misfortunes'— The Slow Battering of India and China—The New Global Hierarchy
Chapter Two: The Strange Odyssey of Jamal al-Din al-Afghani	46
An Insignificant Man in Rough Garments—The 'Sick Man' of Europe and His Dangerous Self-Therapy—Egypt: The Polemicist Emerges—Beyond Self-Strengthening: The Origins of Pan-Islamism and Nationalism—The European Interlude—Apotheosis in Persia—In a Golden Cage: al-Afghani's Last Days in Istanbul—The Long Aftermath
Chapter Three: Liang Qichao's China and the Fate of Asia	124
The Enviably but Inimitable Rise of Japan—The First Impulses of Reform—Japan and the Perils of Exile—The Boxer Rising: More Lessons from Defeat—Pan-Asianism: The Pleasures of Cosmopolitanism—Liang and Democracy in America—The Temptations of Autocracy and Revolution
Chapter Four: 1919, 'Changing the History of the World'	184
The United States and Its Promises of Self-Determination— Liberal Internationalism or Liberal Imperialism?—Making the World Unsafe for Democracy—The Decline of the West?

CONTENTS

Chapter Five: Rabindranath Tagore in East Asia, the Man from the Lost Country	216
Chapter Six: Asia Remade	242
The Sting in the Tail: Pan-Asianism and Military Decolonization—Intellectual Decolonization: The Rise of Neo-Traditionalists—The Triumphs of the Nation-State: Turkey, the Sick Man, Revives—‘The Chinese People have stood up’—The Rise of the ‘Rest’
Epilogue: An Ambiguous Revenge	299
Bibliographic Essay	311
Notes	321
Acknowledgements	341
Picture Credits	342
Index	343