

CONTENT

Acknowledgements.....	5
Content.....	7
Abbreviations.....	9
Chapter 1
The British Labour Party and Europe.....	13
Continuity and change – and transnational networks.....	14
Analytical approach.....	21
Empirical foundation.....	27
Argument and structure.....	29
Chapter 2
The British Labour Party and European integration, 1945–59.....	33
The ECSC, the postwar Labour government and a planned economy.....	33
Revisionism, economic planning and Europe on the eve of the sixties.....	36
Chapter 3
In Search of a European Policy.....	41
A challenging task: defining a consistent European policy.....	41
Divided – and undecided.....	44
Restructured and intensified transnational cooperation.....	49
Transnational cooperation and the prospects for socialist policies.....	51
Policy-making and electability.....	55
Early European policy formulation reconsidered.....	56
Chapter 4
Moving Towards a European Policy.....	59
Conditional support: Labour’s response to the EEC application.....	59
Gaitskell and European socialists.....	63
The logic of wait-and-see.....	66
Transnational activities and tactical manoeuvring.....	68
The Labour Party: moving towards a conclusion.....	72
Gaitskell’s position reassessed.....	75
Chapter 5
An Empowered Party.....	79
The first Wilson government and Europe.....	79
Transnational efforts to bring Britain closer to the EEC.....	82
Further efforts and obstacles.....	86
Wilson’s first year in office and the EEC issue.....	88

Chapter 6
Preparing an Application.....	91
Transnational contacts with core Europe socialists	91
The general election and EEC-membership	95
Tactics and timing	98
Chapter 7
Application and Veto.....	105
A deliberate approach	106
Mobilising transnational networks.....	108
Probing the French.....	111
Membership bid and veto.....	115
Efforts to save the application.....	120
Chapter 8
Not Taking No for an Answer	123
The application left on the table.....	123
Labour's leadership, the Five and Germany	124
All or nothing.....	127
The end of the British European policy impasse	133
Chapter 9
The Veto Years, EFTA and a Socialist Policy for Europe	139
The French non , EFTA and Britain.....	139
A social democratic programme for Europe: initiatives and developments	144
Socialism on a European level: dispersal of an idea.....	148
Chapter 10
Opposition, Enlargement and the European Policy	155
Preparing for negotiations.....	155
British European policy: continuity	156
Maximising socialist policies: policy formulation and networking.....	160
Cross-border endeavours for more European socialist policies.....	163
Harmonised socialist understanding of an enlarged Europe.....	166
Chapter 11
Wilson and the Fate of Labour's European Policy	171
No accession on Tory terms	171
A political life raft: renegotiation and referendum	176
Member of the club – postponed Labour participation in the EP	179
Chapter 12
Labour and Europe Reassessed.....	183
Explaining the Labour Party's European policy	184
Greater continuity and evolving perceptions	186
Transnational networking, interest maximising and socialisation	192
List of Archives.....	195
Bibliography	197